OFFICIALS SAY COURT INJUNCTION WILL TEND TO PREVENT RAIL TEUP

Despite Protestations of Organized Labor That U. S. Bench Has Exceeded Its Authority, Department of Justice Say Ruling Will Eliminate Tieup.

Washington, July 13—Despite the protestations of organized labor that the United States Court at Chicago has no authority to go outside its jurisdiction, (the northern district of Illinois,) in restraining railroad shopmen from striking, thus interfering with interstate commerce, the official opinion was expressed at the Department of Justice today that the sweeping injunction granted the government in Chicago will serve to prevent another nation-wide transportation tieup.

Labor leaders continued today to challenge the right of the government to obtain in a court order in one udicial district which is applicable to the entire country and expressed the opinion that the injunction obtained by Attorney General Daugherty in Illinois would not prevent further railroad strikes.

At the Department of Justice, however, it was stated that the Attorney General firmly believed that the judgment of the court was sound and that there never again would be another extensive strike tying up interstate commerce.

"No strike," Mr. Daugherty declared in a telegram to the department from his home in Columbus, Ohio," can be conducted in this country with violence and vandalism without severe punishment to those who thus participate. The law in this regard is now forever settled."

Evidence of the extent to which railroads have thus far recovered from last summer's strike of shopmen was given today by the American Railway Association in announcing that the freight cars in use in the U. S., were in better condition on July 1, that at any time since December, 1920. Only 8.4 per cent of the cars were reportd to be in need of repair at the end of June.

Under the program adopted recantly in New York by the railroad executives, the number of "bad order" cars are to be reduced to five percent of the total by October 1, 1923.

TO DRILL ANOTHER WELL AT PLANT OF WATER DEPARTMENT

City Manager S. O. Hale and City Auditor T. H. Zell were authorized to drill another well at the plant of the municipal water department, Old Town by the City Commission Thursday night.

Authorization of the new well was made on the request of City Auditor Zell. The well will cost about $400 plus material which the department already has on hand but has no use for.

City Auditor Zell told commissioners that screens in the three wells now in use are becoming clogged with sand and gravel. He said it is impossible to shut down the wells in order to blow the screens and clean out the gravel. Such an operation would take a week, he said.

He said construction of another well would permit the employes to pump two wells to keep up the city supply while the other two were being cleaned. When a well is blown, city water at a pressure of 128 pounds is turned into it through a two-inch nozzle. The water forces sand out through the top of the well. The top is then closed and the water pressure again turned on blowing sand out of the screen at the bottom of the casing.

When the new well is constructed, all four will be used all the time, City Auditor Zell said. He believes such operation will cut down the power used, provide an extra water supply and furnish an emergency well when one or more needs cleaning or repairs.

MONEY STOCKS IN U. S. SHOW BIG INCREASE DURING PAST SIX YEARS

Washington, July 13—Money stocks in the United States have increased $3,284,000,000 in six years, the treasury announced today. Money of all kinds now in the country amount to $8,603,000,000. When the nation entered the war in 1917, the aggregate was only $5,312,000,000.

The latest figure on monetary wealth reflects accurately remarkable expansion of industry in all fields. Since 1914, the money stocks have gained about $5,000,000,000.

There is now in circulation, both in coin and currency, $4,729,000,000. If this sum were divided among all of the 111,000,000 people of the United States, each one would have $42.51. That per capita wealth is 17 cents more than it was a month ago and is $2.65 more than a year ago.

FONR HOMES IN MINING TOWN DYNAMITED—NO ONE INJURED

Residence of Prominent Union Leader Damaged When Unknown Persons Set Off Charge of Explosive —Blame Grievance for Tragedy

Pittston, Pa., July 13—Four homes in this city, one that of Alex Campbell, leader of the insurgent element of the United Mine Workers of America in the Pittston district, and one of the foremost union leaders in Luzerne County, were dynamited within a period of fifteen minutes, starting at two o'clock this morning.

Front porches were blown into atoms and furniture was wrecked and persons thrown from their beds, but no one was injured.

The first explosion took place at the home of Campbell, the second a few moments later at the home of Charles Alba, the third at the home of Michael Dezalvo and the fourth at the home of Joseph Martinell.

Campbell is chairman of the general grievance committee of the Pennsylvania Coal Company and the Hillside Coal and Iron Company. He had just returned home yesterday from Atlantic City, where he was in attendance at the joint conference of the anthracite miners and mine owners, sitting to fix amicable agreement.

Campbell last presided at a meeting of the grievance committee and turned down the proposition to call a general strike in the Pittston district due to petty grievances existing at several of the Pennsylvania Coal Company's collieries.

UNITED STATES AND ENGLAUD IN ACCORD ON RUHR

French Government Greatly Disappointed in Premier's Statement

Washington, July 13.—One fact stood out above all else here today in the discussion revolving about Premier Stanley Baldwin's statement of the British attitude toward the French occupation of the Ruhr, namely, that the views of the United States and of Great Britain are practically identical.

Because this government has no official connection with the reparations no comment was forthcoming at the State Department as to the reaction of the administration toward Baldwin's speech, but the prime minister's outline of policy is known to be pleasing Secretary of State Hughes because it largely embraces the principles laid down by him at New Haven, Conn., on December 29, 1922.

In this speech, Secretary Hughes disapproved of the plans of Premier Poincare to speed up reparations payments by force of arms, although he held it to be necessary that Germany should pay to the limit of her capacity. Premier Baldwin's announcement of British policy embraced both of these principles, it was pointed out in official and diplomatic circles here today, thus indicating virtual harmony between Great Britain and the United States in their efforts to solve the reparations tangle.

The principal objective of both governments is the re-establishment of economic stability throughout the world, and both have made it plain that the reparations question is the root of all the trouble.

Until that problem, is solved to the satisfaction of all concerned, they see no hope for improvement elsewhere.

Paris, July 13.—The French government is greatly disappointed in Premier Stanley Baldwin's statement of England's reparation policy it was learned officially today, because of its condemnation of the Ruhr occupation and its failure to condemn passive resistance.

It is not expected, it was said, that the proposals in the forthcoming British note to Germany will be any more acceptable to France than Bonar Law's proposal of last January.

FRENCH SOLDIERS OCCUPYING CITY AND IMPOSE SENTENCES

Officials Sent to Prison For Failure to Obey Invaders' Orders

Cologne, July 13.—French troops occupied Lemberg, 25 miles east of Coblenz. After the occupation the German officials were ordered to "carry on," but they refused and the posts, telegraph and telephone service were suspended.

The French court at Werden sentenced three burgomasters to prison for terms of three years and imposed fines of from 10 to 50 million marks. They were charged with disobedience to French orders.

Drastice sentences have been imposed at Buttrop, where two French soldiers were killed when their car crashed into a heavy stone in the road.

The Germans declare that in the six months of occupation the French have sent from the Ruhr only 1,000,000 tons of coal and coke, the same amount which was supplied in five days before occupation.

Ninety-two persons have been killed since the French troops entered Germany and 71,145 have been expelled from the Ruhr and Rhineland.

The French today after completely occupying Barmen, moved in the direction of Elberfeld, another highly important industrial center.

At Barmen, heavy forces occupied the town hall, the postoffice and telegraph offices and the Reichsbank. Other detachments took over the railroads.

The French disarmed the German police at Barmen.

In official circles here the occupation of Barmen and Elberfeld are interpreted as Premier Poincare's answer to England's criticism of the Ruhr venture.

MANY LIVES LOST AS TOWN FLOODED

San Salvador, July 13.—Many lives are believed to have been lost by the flooding of villages and towns on the Salvador-Guatemala border. The rivel Paz, Central America's largest stream, is running far out of its bank.

Property damage has been enormous and is spread over a great area.

Roads are impassable and little news has come from the stricken districts.

SALESMAN A SUICIDE.

Columbus, July 13.—Ernest Hartman, 62, salesman, committed suicide by shooting himself through the abdomen with a revolver at his home. In ill health for more than a year, Hartman complained of feeling worse, and while his wife was next door calling a physician he shot himself, dying a short time later.

SAYS CARDS ELL HER SHE WILL ESCAPE ELECTRIC CHAIR

Laughing loudly in her cell in Auburn (N. Y. State Prison, where she will be confined until taken to Sing Sing State Prison to be electrocuted for the murder of Frederick Schneider, wealthy New York contractor, with whom she lived and whom she convicted of murdering in his automobile, Mrs. Anna Buzzi declared to reporters she would never die in the chair. "I have asked the cards," she said, They told me at my trial I would be disappointed, but now they tell me I will get a new trial and that I will be freed."

CONSPIRACY IS AIMED AGAINST RUSSIAN CHIEFS

Overthrow of Lenine and Trotsky Plan of Rebel Forces

Berlin, July 13.—That the famous "cheka," the Russian secret police, have discovered a conspiracy almost within the soviet government itself for the overthrow of Lenine and Trotzky is the sensational news which the Vienna Journal claims to have received from Moscow.

It is alleged that Bela Kun, who was the head of the Hungarian Bolshevik regime at Budapest, together with Commander-in-Chief Gitis of the red army garrison at Petrograd, are the chief conspirators. Their plans, according to the newspaper, was to replace the executive committee, which runs the soviet government, with a directory of 12 members.

Bela Kun, it is said, organized the new communist party at Moscow, which is dissatisfied with the moderate tendencies of Lenine, who has made too many concessions to capitalism. This party asserts that the Russian people have lost confidence in Lenine and Trotzky, because of their faithlessness to the people of communism, and that, therefore, they must be replaced.

It is claimed that the conspiracy was practically ready for the signal when it was uncovered by the cheka. Bela Kun, it is alleged, fled and is said to be in hiding in the Ukraine. Gilis is reported to have been arrested in Petrograd.

A considerable portion of the German press is much worked up over an appeal to communists and radicals contained in a sensational display covering the entire first page of the "Rote Fahne," officials communist organ. This article is interpreted by other newspapers as calling directly for civil war in Germany.

"Cuno cabinet is bankrupt," read the headlines. "Internal and external crisis threaten with next few days to lead to acute catastrophe." "Cumulative information that all preparations are completed for separatists to proclaim Rhenish Westphalian independent buffer state."

The paper then alleges if the movement occurs the Bavarian fascisti will separate Bavaria from the rest of Germany and charges that General Ludendorff and Adolph Hitler are ready to move northward toward Berlin and Hamburg, and that the reichswehr will joint the fascisti "to carry out Hugo Stinnes' program against the proletariat."

TALENT RESPONDS FOR PARK PROGRAM

Officials of the Community Recreation Association Friday, announced many responses had been received for talent for the program to be given at Willow Tree Park Friday evening.

Many performers will take part in the evening's entertainment, it is said. This is the second of a series of entertainments at this park. Employes of the Ohio Mill of the Hooven and Allison Company are assisting in the program and will offer considerable talent to the evening.

Children will present a program under the direction of Miss Eleanor Kiernan, playground supervisor. There will also be a number of individual songs and dances and games for the children.

ENGLISH PEOPLE APPROVE STAND OF BALDWIN ON REPARATIONS

Note to Be Sent Germany Will Accept Latter's Suggestion for Commission to Inquire Into Nation's Economic Condition to Determine Position.

London, July 13—General approval but a noticeable lack of enthusiasm marks the reaction today to Premier Stanley Baldwin's statement of the British reparations policy.

Approval comes from the fact that England has at last made a move. The lack of enthusiasm is due to the uncertainty as to what the move constitutes.

Dissatisfaction is expected in two quarters. Lord Rothmere's papers express displeasure that the premier did not castigate Germany. The liberal press is displeased because it sees in the statement only the continued dragging out of negotiations with France.

Foreign office experts, it is learned, have already partially completed the draft of the British note to Germany that will be submitted to the allied nations for approval. It is not expected to be ready for transmission to the other powers, however, before Tuesday or Wednesday.

The note probably will accept in principle the German suggestion for a commission to inquire into Germany's economic condition and determine her capacity to pay.

The note will also suggest a revision of the guarantees submitted by Germany in her last reparations note and will suggest an end of passive resistance.

This will make it possible for France to join the negotiations without loss of dignity as Premier Poincare has repeatedly said he would not discuss reparations with Germany until passive resistance in the Ruhr was abandoned.

Thus the negotiations would result quickly, if France joins with England, in the lifting of the restrictions in the occupied area and remove the cause of chaos in Germany which Preimer Baldwin complained of in his statement.

It is also expected that the British note will suggest an international economic conference whose function it would probably be to discuss the interallied debts which Baldwin says is one of the causes of unrest in Europe.

The position of the British government was epitomized by Premier Baldwin in his speech in the house of commons as follows: "We hope the allies will join with us. If they don't, England will be forced to act independently.

In his long-awaited announcement Premier Baldwin closed the last door of hope that the differences between Great Britain and France would be amicably settled, as they have been so often before.

"France's course is endangering the peace of the world," Baldwin declared. "From the beginning we have made it clear that in our opinion the occupation of the Ruhr was not calculated to produce the maximum amount of reparations payment. Many of the consequences which were anticipated are in the course of fulfillment. Germany herself appears to be moving fast toward economic chaos.

"Opinion throughout Europe, and not the least in Great Britain, is becoming more sensitive to these conditions, with alarm at their continuance. The recovery of the world is in danger. Peace is at stake. Peace cannot be secured until three questions are settled. First, the payment of reparations; second, settlement of the interallied debts; and the third, the security of a pacified Europe."

THIRTEEN OHIO MAYORS UNDER FIRE OF STATE

Charged With Not Eliminating Law Violations On Communities

Columbus, O. July 13—Thirteen mayors of Ohio cities and towns were under probation today—Friday the thirteenth—because charges have been made to Governor Donahey that gambling, bootlegging and other law violations run rampant in their communities.

Emphatic warnings have been dispatched to the officials that unless a great improvement is noted immediately there may be some mayors looking for new jobs. A number of sheriffs also received notices from Governor Donahey that laws were made to enforce—not just for the legislature's amusement.

The last batch of officials notified to clean up their jurisdictions, included Samuel Orr, of Newark; Mayor Leslie Wycoff, of Shagrin Falls; Mayor W. V. Koons, of Chauncey; Mayor Thomas H. Alexander of Put in Bay and Sheriff Bob E. Wing, of Auglaize County, once Cincinnati baseball player.

OHIO CITY SWEPT BY SEVERE STORM

ATHENS, O. July 13—Friday the thirteenth found this city busy cleaning away the debris of the worst rain storm in its history. Several inches of rain fell last night within an hour and a half, many business houses were flooded, scores of automobiles stalled in the streets and cellars of hundreds of residences inundated.

Mechanicsburg, a town near here, lying along a small creek was, swept as by a tidal wave, and the property loss there is large. Train service in all directions is interrupted as wrecks to the east and north were caused by spreading tracks during the night.

COMMISSION DISAGREES ON MRS. STANNARD CASE HER REMOVAL TO STAND

Two Members of Body Give Opposite Opinions—Matron Thereby Loses Fight for Re-Instatement—May Be Carried to Civil Courts of State

Columbus, O., July 13.—Women of Ohio rallied to the defense of Mrs. Mae Stannard, former matron of the Girl's Industrial School at Delaware, today after a deadlock vote of the State Civil Service Commission had sustained the order of State Welfare Director Harper removing her from office.

Officials of the Ohio League of Women Voters and the State Federation of Women's Clubs, went into conference to decide what action would be taken.

A decision of the state supreme court in the case of the industrial commission of Ohio versus Common Pleas Judge Evans carried up from Franklin County in 1918, may end the chances of Mrs. Stannard for any further appeal according to legal authorities today.

This decision holds that "when the members of a commission of two fail to concur in an order disaffirming or modifying an order of removal, the order appealed from will stand as final in the removal proceedings."

Apparently this case is analogous to that in the Stannard matter, the civil service commission having deadlocked.

"The women of Ohio will go as far as possible to re-instate Mrs. Stannard as matron of the industrial school," was the announcement.

"Plans for carrying the case to the State Supreme Court, if necessary, are being made," continued the announcement.

Mrs. Stannard issued a brief statement:

"If the state of Ohio, by the vote of one man, can decide against me that is the state's responsibility," she said. "I came to this state backed by national welfare organizations and upon the invitation of the former director of public welfare.

"For thirteen months I gave the best I had. I was vindicated by the attorney general, women's organizations, newspapers and public opinion."

Director Harper declared in a statement to International News Service, that "no impartial court in the country could have done otherwise."

"However, I am greatly surprised at the split in the commission," he added. "The testimony at the hearing definitely substantiated our charges of neglect of duty, misfeasance in office and inefficiency."

In spite of the furore of activity inspired in women's political circles by the removal and action of the commission, Dr. Harper said he did not anticipate any political consequences.

The order of removal issued by Dr. Harper stands and Mrs. Stannard has lost her fight for re-instatement.

Rollin Swisher, Democratic member of the Civil Service Commission affirmed Director Harper's order of dismissal.

William S. Bundy, Republican member, voted to re-instate Mrs. Stannard.

Under the law, in case of a disagreement of the commission, equivalent to a deadlock, the dismissal order stands.

No statement was issued by the Civil Service Commission relative to the decision, aside from the mere vote of the two members.

Mrs. Stannard was removed about a month ago by the welfare director on charges of inefficiency. Soon after dismissal, Mrs. Stannard demanded a hearing before the Civil Service Commission in an effort at vindication.

The hearing was concluded Wednesday afternoon at Delaware.

Officers of the State Federation of Women's Clubs made a strong fight in Mrs. Stannard's behalf and welfare workers from many parts of the country were brought before the commission to tetstitfy.

Mrs. Stannard has openly charged that politics and personal malice were responsible for her removal.

HARDING FAILS TO FIND READY SOLUTION OF ALASKAN PROBLEM

Aboard U. S. S. Henderson with President Harding in Alaska, July 13.—President Harding is not finding any readymade solution for Alaska's numerous problems. The president came to the northern territory hopeful of finding unified sentiment of Alaskans themselves as to what was wanted in the way of remedial legislative relief, but the week spent in cruising through southern Alaska where the chief industry is located, has failed utterly to reveal any such unity.

The various interests which make up industrial and business Alaska, principally fisheries and lumbering—are conflicting in their wants in almost as great a degree as there is difference of opinion in Washington concerning them.

Generally speaking, these interest want lesser restrictions in their operations but opposed to them is a considerable body of Alaskan public sentiment not in favor of giving big business too free a hand in exploiting Alaska's unrivalled resources.

CHARGE OPERATOR OF BUS LINE HAS VIOLATED RULING

Clarence S. Stoner, owner and operator of an interurban bus line known as the Dayton and Xenia Bus Company was charged with three offenses against city ordinances in affidavits presented to the City Commission Thursday night by Judge Marcus Shoup as counsel for the Dayton and Xenia Motor Bus Company a subsidiary of the Dayton, Springfield and Xenia Southern Railway Company.

Nine affidavits were presented the commission. They charge Stoner with operating four busses between here and Dayton instead of tow, as he specfied in his application for a license, and declare he is paying license fees for but two machines. They also charge that instead of following the specified bus route in and out of the city by way of West Main Street that he is using West Market Street as a thoroughfare. They charge further that instead of confining his operations to interurban bus lines that he also does taxicab service without a taxicab license.

Commissioners agreed to instruct City Manager S. O. Hale to see that the ordinances affecting these alleged infractions are enforced. The affidavits themselves it is expected will be taken before Police Judge E. Dawson Smith where formal charges will be filed against Stoner, it is said. Penalties on the different ordinances, said to have been disobeyed by Stoner, carry fines not to exceed $100 for each offense, each day to constitute a separate offense and give the City Manager authority to revoke the license.

Only one affidavit was read to the commission. It was furnished by John Simison, agent at the Xenia terminal of the traction company. He declared that his company refused the request of a number of Xenia people to take a party to Hills and Dales by bus from Xenia on the ground that the company did not have a taxicab license. He alleges the party was accommodated in one of Stoner's busses. He alleges further that a Stoner bus operates each morning on West Market Street in violation of a city ordinance.

Judge Shoup told the commission evidence he has supports the charge the Stoner company has been operating four busses instead of two since May 27 and possibly before. City Manager Hale said Stoner had told him he intended to start using four busses July 1. He said Stoner promised to pay his license fees for four busses before July 10 but that the fees had not yet been paid.

Judge Shoup said the company he represents operates two busses all the time and a third part of the time, and pays a full license fee for all three. He told the commissioners his company only sought to make the opposition line conform to the same requirements followed by the company he represents in observance with the city ordinances.

The city ordinance fixes a fee for each bus operated each day. The owner certifies the number of busses he uses in making application for license. Another ordinance specifies the route to be followed by busses and another specifies that they shall be used for interurban passengers only. Taxicabs operate under a different ordinance and the fee is also separate.

Judge Shoup said Stoner was openly defying the bus ordinances and boasting of the fact. Stoner recently paid license fees for two busses up to July 1 after opposing the city bus ordinance since it became effective more than a year ago. In the meantime he had enjoined the city from collection.

CHARGE OPERATOR OF BUS LINE HAS VIOLATED RULING

Clarence S. Stoner, owner and operator of an interurban bus line known as the Dayton and Xenia Bus Company was charged with three offenses against city ordinances in affidavits presented to the City Commission Thursday night by Judge Marcus Shoup as counsel for the Dayton and Xenia Motor Bus Company a subsidiary of the Dayton, Springfield and Xenia Southern Railway Company.

Nine affidavits were presented the commission. They charge Stoner with operating four busses between here and Dayton instead of tow, as he specfied in his application for a license, and declare he is paying license fees for but two machines. They also charge that instead of following the specified bus route in and out of the city by way of West Main Street that he is using West Market Street as a thoroughfare. They charge further that instead of comfining his operations to interurban bus lines that he also does taxicab service without a taxicab license.

Commissioners agreed to instruct City Manager S. O. Hale to see that the ordinances affecting these alleged infractions are enforced. The affidavits themselves it is expected will be taken before Police Judge E. Dawson Smith where formal charges will be filed against Stoner, it is said. Penalties on the different ordinances, said to have been disobeyed by Stoner carry fines not to exceed $100 for each offense, each day to constitute a separate offense and give the City Manager authority to revoke the license.

Only one affidavit was read to the commission. It was furnished by John Simison, agent at the Xenia terminal of the traction company. He declared that his company refused the request of a number of Xenia people to take a party to Hills and Dales by bus from Xenia on the ground that the company did not have a taxicab license. He alleges the party was accommodated in one of Stoner's busses. He alleges further that a Stoner bus operates each morning on West Market Street in violation of a city ordinance.

Judge Shoup told the commission evidence he has supports the charge the Stoner company has been operating four busses instead of two since May 27 and possibly before. City Manager Hale said Stoner had told him he intended to start using four busses July 1. He said Stoner promised to pay his license fees for four busses before July 10 but that the fees had not yet been paid.

Judge Shoup said the company he represents operates two busses all the time and a third part of the time, and pays a full license fee for all three He told the commissioners his company only sought to make the opposition line conform to the same requirements followed by the company he represents in observance with the city ordinances.

The city ordinance fixes a fee for each bus operated each day. The owner certifies the number of busses he uses in making application for license. Another ordinance specifies the route to be followed by busses and another specifies that they shall be used for interurban passengers only. Taxicabs operate under a different ordinance and the fee is also separate.

Judge Shoup said Stoner was openly defying the bus ordinances and boasting of the fact. Stoner recently paid license fees for two busses up to July 1 after opposing the city bus ordinance since it became effective more than a year ago. In the meantime he had enjoined the city from collection.

BUNCOED BY ARTIST, HARDING ENJOYS IT.

President Harding enjoys being buncoed by "an artist who can skin you without your having felt it," but the crude workers who think they can "put something over" on him get on his nerves.

Just before leaving Washington for Alaska, it was revealed at the White House, the President made that confession in a letter to Colonel George B. Christian, of Marion, the father of the Secretary to the President.

It was back in the days when Editor Harding ran the Marion Star he felt proud to extend a loan to the stranger, who had all the appearances of a gentleman and represented himself to be a member of the Harding family, until he told the story of the stranger's call to his friend Judge Scofield, a leading citizen of Marion. The Judge told him that on the same day he had extended financial aid to a gentleman, who described himself as a distant cousin named "Scofield" from Virginia.

All the sting was taken from the incident for Mr. Harding and Judge Scofield a few days later when they learned that Myron T. Herrick, then a Cleveland business man, had fallen a victim to the same stranger.

"I am in receipt of your letter," President Harding wrote in reply, "in which you tell me of the call upon you by the breezy and companionable chap who, after the fashion of the gentleman who was named Harding one day, Scofield another and Herrick another day, took you in for a small loan which would accom-[illegible]odate him on his virtuous way. I can only sympathize with you. J[illegible]u remember the chap who represented himself to me as a Hard-[illegible] from 'Old Virginia,' and I recall that I presented him to you and [illegible] He t[illegible] that he took you in as well as me and that you and he fought [illegible] over some of the battlefields of the Civil War without your detecting any fraud in him; but you did escape being touched as I [illegible] as for a small draft upon my cash account.

"In other words, when you are taken in it is a joy to be taken [illegible] so beautifully that you haven't the slightest knowledge of it until you come to the later realization that a promised loan is not returned. I do not know, but that it is a good thing that we have some of them in our midst at all times.

HYMNS, OLD AND NEW.

At the Christian Endeavor convention in Des Moines a speaker from Boston did not hesitate to assail certain hymns that have won a firm place for themselves in popular favor. "I've Reached the Land of Corn and Wine," was deprecated as a possible incitement to violation of the Volstead act. "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," has "no brains after the first line." Even "Onward, Christian Soldiers" was declared to be on probation, as perhaps an instigation to militarism.

It is not always the hymns that are most remarkable as examples of literature which have most endeared themselves to the multitude. The first appeal is that of the sentiment itself. Poets have failed where devout psalmodists of meager education and much devotion have been successful. Men who followed a trade or worked as artisans have been moved to sing, and their songs have lived because they came from the depths of life and not from the shallower foundation of literary artifice.

What makes a good hymn? The Boston speaker decries jazz; but the successful hymn has a strong element of the rhythmic and the dynamic. The tune is such as all can sing. It does not urge the untrained voice to inaccessible heights. It does not introduce florid elaboration in the melody. So much for the music. The words must express a universal longing. They must speak for an ardent faith. Amiable ambiguities will not serve.

The great hymns do not lean too hard upon adjectives—they are alive with verbs and vertebrate with nouns. What is true for secular songs is true for hymns; they must be such as the crowd can take in and give out again; they must seem true to the experience of the majority. No lettered, cultured censorship is the court of last resort in the choice of the hymns that shall survive. The immortality of a spiritual song depends on the democratic public and not on the aristocratic few.

BABIES NOT BARRED.

A lot of people would like to shake hands with the Wernersville man who advertised that he would rent his houses only to families with children, the bigger the family the lower the rate.

He loses money by the plan, of course, but it is worth it to point a badly needed moral to the country's landlords. Not that other owners of property could imitate the rather whimsical idea of taking off $5 for each extra child over his minimum of two. Nor even that landlords generally could bar out parents unable to show a brace of youngsters as a kind of "down money." But his philanthropy—it is nothing less—points out a condition especially prevalent in big cities which is doing a subtle injury to the Nation.

This is the reluctance which many property owners show to renting their dwellings or apartments to people who have children. This is so notoriously true that it is a stock vaudeville joke. Every young couple with babies has experienced the bleak finality of some agent's "I'm sorry, but the owner won't rent to families with children."

That's not true in every case, obviously, for families do find shelter. But common experience proves that it is true sufficiently often to add appreciably to the problems of living and raising a family. There can't be statistics compiled about it, but it is not illogical to infer that this prohibition has something to do with keeping down the birth rate.

To Can Blackberries or Blueberries by the Cold Pack Method.—Wash the berries and put them into hot, sterilized glass jars, then pour over them a hot, medium-thin sirup made by boiling three quarts of sugar and two quarts of water together for five minutes. Partially seal the jars (that is, put top wire up but do not press down side wire) and process the jar in your washboiler canner for 16 minutes in boiling water which rises almost to top of jar. Remove from canner, completely seal, cool out of a draught and store after inverting to test for leaks.

Blackberry Jelly.—Wash and mash freshly picked blackberries and put them into an agateware or enamelware kettle, cook slowly, adding no water, until they are tender, then turn them into a jelly bag and let drip till no more juice comes. Quarter two quarts of apples, not removing seeds, and stew these in the preserving kettle with only just enough water to keep from sticking to the bottom; when tender, drain and measure the juice. To every cupful of blackberry juice add one cup of the strained apple juice and bring to the boiling point; add an equal quantity of granulated sugar and boil until two drops will form at once on a spoon when a little of the juice is held high in the air and dripped back into the kettle. Turn at once into hot, sterilized glasses, let cool, then cover with melted paraffine.

Raspberry Jelly.—This may be made in the same way as the blackberry jelly, with an equal quantity of apple juice combined with the raspberry juice. Or currant juice may be used in place of the apple juice. If desired, commercial bottled pectin can be used with the raspberries to make jelly. (Follow directions which come with the bottled pectin.)

Gooseberry-Red Currant Jam—"Top and tail" three pounds of ripe red gooseberries and put them into a saucepan with one pound of stemmed red currants and three pounds of sugar; let stand five hours, then bring to the boiling point and boil for 30 minutes, stirring often. Turn into hot, sterilized glasses, cool and cover with melted paraffine. This makes a delicious jam.

THE MORNINGS OF CHILDHOOD

In the days of long ago
Youth's delights were ours to know
And our dreams were fair before us
And the hills were good to climb.
We were brave and we were strong
Neither pain nor grief nor wrong
Had left one blot of sorrow
On the register of time.
It was sweet to wake at morning
For the day was always new,
And the past was left behind us
With the night we'd slumbered through.

In the days of long ago
We could gayly come and go,
We could race the fruitful orchard
Or go trudging down the lane.
We could wander left or right,
Light of heart from dawn till night.
For we had not met with failure,
Had not heard the voice of gain;
Then no scorn or censure waited
At the ending of our play,
And our little wrongs at nighttime
Were all gently washed away.
Now men look on us as wise
And there's sorrow in our eyes,
On our cheeks the lines of trial
Have been permanently traced.
Much we've suffered, much we've learned,
And our souls are seared and burned
And the memory of our failings
Is not easily erased.
Now the sunny mornings call us
As they called us long ago,
But we awake to wordly wisdom
And the memory of woe.

To the ribbons of the past
We are tied and tethered fast,
To life's cares and griefs and burdens
We are slaves forevermore,
Not as children now, but men,
Morning calls us back again
To the tasks we've left unfinished
And the tasks which lie before,
We have looked on pain and felt it,
We have worshiped fame and gold,
And we find each glad new morning
Has been tainted by the old.

Today's Talk

THRILLS

There are those whose blood would boil and whose eyes would pop with excitement over a dog fight or a runaway horse, or some spectacular fire—who would let a perfect moon, in a setting of clustered stars, shine its heart out without a single throb within their human being.

Stevenson, in one of his delightful essays, tells of his excitement and happiness as he would sit of an evening with one of his favorites and find the hours soon "enlivened with such a clatter of horse-shoes, and such a rattle of musketry, and such a stir of talk."

The fact is that we select our thrills. Few of them come to us. If we want them, we must make them.

How many lives there are that are a veritable network of thrills. The late Theodore Roosevelt was a bundle of thrills unto himself—and he thrilled his nation and the world as well, and got the fun of a boy out of it.

Much of all that we are is but a state of mind, after all. We think ourselves into success and happiness.

We get the things that we want more than anything else in the world because we keep wanting them. And when we have wanted them hard enough, we either get them, or we aren't worthy of them anyway—and so miss out.

Burns was thrilled over the flower that looked up at him from his feet as he walked through the meadow, and over the field mouse that the plough released from its nest.

And who is there who is worthy or keen enough to catch the thrills that Keats and Shelley garnered to themselves?

A MARGIN FOR OVERLOAD

Is Present in Every Good Machine and in Every Business Organization of Stability. Yet the Wise User Avoids Calling Upon It.

The 10-ton crane will for a while lift 15 tons. The five-ton motor truck will for a while carry seven or eight tons. But the wise user knows that it is better to avoid continuous overloading.

So it is with money. The dollar can be overworked. During brief periods it can be forced to yield more than a safe, economic rate. But the wise owner of money knows it is better to ask for only a safe yield, a yield that may be accepted with no misgivings, a yield that requires no continuous argument to prove that it is justifiable.

FIRPO, WINNER OVER WILLIARD MAY MEET DEMPSEY LABOR DAY

New York, July 13.—Tex Rickard will offer Jack Dempsey a match with Luis Firpo, the batttle to be staged either at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, or under agreement with the fight clubs holding concessions to the Polo Grounds or the Yankee Stadium in New York, Rickard announced today.

Failing to get Dempsey into the ring with Firpo on Labor Day, Rickard said he would make every effort to have the Argentine mauler meet Harry Wills, Negro havyweight.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, believes Wills, not Firpo the next logical opponent for Dempsey.

Jersey City, N. J., July 13.—That hairy, scowling, throw-back to the days of the cave men that they call "the wild bull of the pampas," clubbed old Jess Willard to the floor in the eighth round of their fight at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, last night.

Old Jess fell only after a gallant stand, a stand so gallant it won the hearts of 100,000 people, the biggest crowd that ever assembled in an enclosure at a sporting event in America, a stand that had them chanting in unison: "Come on Jess!"

Old Jess came on just as far as he could, but when he fell 41 merciless years fell on top of him. The iron fists of Luis Angel Firpo, the strange man from the Argentine, had been thudding incessantly against Willard's portly body for seven rounds.

In the seventh one punch with all of Firpo's bulk swinging behind it, landed in the pit of Willard's stomach. It was a sickening punch. Willard's great face contorted with pain; he half stumbled as he walked back to his corner at the close of the round.

As the bell rang for the eighth, however, old Jess stepped forward, trying to make the step seem brisk and with him went the hearts of the great throng packed into the arena. 'Come on, Jess!" came the chant, thundering out of the blackness beyond the glare of the big lamps. The old boy, "came on" gallantly but the sickness from that seventh round punch was still on him.

The Finish.

Now the "wild bull of the pampas" rushed, head down, fairly snorting, his gloved fists flying before him like the "bolas" of his native Argentine. Willard jabbed at him with a long left from which the power was gone. Firpo pushed forward, throwing his head back until his black hair was a-toss. He rushed against Willard with such force that big Jess fell towards the ropes. Firpo's fists were flying at the broad body before him, then when the round had gone about a minute and fifty-five seconds, Firpo flung a high right that landed with an impact you could have heard ten yards away against Willard's jaw.

The blow staggered the mighty frame of the old ex-champion of the world. His knees bowed. Then Firpo began clubbing again and again at Willard's face and jaw with his right until Willard finally slipped to one knee on the floor. One hand was holding tightly to a rope strand as he went down and Henry Lewis, the referee, began counting over him. He was counted out in that position. It is true Willard might have gotten up, before the finish of the count, but he would have been clubbed down again. Perhaps he felt he had gone far enough—certainly he must have realized he could go no farther.

He was not hurt. His body was red from the hammering it had received and his face was little bloody, one ear was mangled. These are minor injuries in ring warfare. "That's the last one," he mumbled as he disappeared in the crowd. Firpo, the winner, received the cheers of the crowd without a smile, then he, too, disappeared from view, the ring was cleared and another bout went on.

Willard's weight was 242 and Firpo's 214.

Willard made an astonishing showing until he got that smash in the stomach in the seventh. "The wild bull of the Pampas" was by no means as wild as he has been in some of his bouts. The old ex-champion held him off with a long left, survived some of his fiercest smashes, and outboxed and outfought him in a couple of rounds.

This was between Floyd Johnson of Iowa, whose defeat at the hands of Willard gave Willard this last time on the pugilistic earth, and Jack McAuliffe of Detroit, beaten by Firpo at the milk fund show. Only a minute and a few seconds of the first round had elapsed when Johnson nailed Mc Auliffe with a right hand to the chin and down went the slim, dark-haired boy from Detroit.

"Tiny" Jim Herman of Omaha and Cliff Kramer of California fought eight fierce rounds. Herman weighed

REDS STRENGTHEN THEIR POSITION BY DEFEATING PHILS

The Reds are surely playing ball with one foot in the gravy these halcyon days.

While the Moranites are picking the white meat and strengthening their newly-gained second place position, the Pittsburghers are getting gum boils trying to bite off the pesky New Yorkers.

The situation is delightfully dramatic and to the liking of bugs in this corner of the universe. The Cincinnati outfit fell into a rare turn of luck through the maneuvers of the schedule makers. Just at the crucial time the season's program threw them in the soft nest provided by the lowly Phillies while the ambitious Pirates were engaged in mortal combat with the league leaders.

If the Reds had to play the Phillies all season they would have had their names embroidered on the penant some time ago. In eight starts this season the Quakers have failed to come away with a victory. Weinert gave them a fighting chance Thursday when he held the Redlegs to but six safeties but he was unfortunately pitted against Luque who raised the ante on the Phillie hurler by permitting but three hits. Even a six hit hurler can't win if the Cuban bears down hard enough.

In the meantime Pittsburg has had its fingers in the throat of John McGraw's hirelings, but has only managed to pinch off one victory in three grabs at the New Yorker's tonsils. New York's victory Wednesday put the Reds in second position while they increased their slender lead Thursday by winning while Bill McKechnie's outfit was dividing a double header in the metropolis.

If the Reds can stand the pace against the Pirates and Cubs, their toughest rivals this season, their penant dream will be realized. The Moranites are not afraid of New York. In the series with the McGraw athletes to date, New York has come off second best and if the Reds can shake off the Pittsburghers they are willing to take their chances with New York.

SARAZEN WILL HAVE REAL OPPOSITION IN RACE FOR TITLE

Inwood Country Club, Far Rock away, N. Y. July 13—The fight for fame and fortune which will go with the winning of the open golf championship of the United States, started today with a carefully selected field of professional and amateur players seeking the title.

Gene Sarazen, winner last year at Skokie, will have opposition this year to retain his title. Walter Hagen, Joe Kirkwood, MacDonald Smith, and a host of others are after the crown.

The qualifying tests which covered a period of four days did not prove anything remarkable. Practically all of those expected to qualify, lived up to expectations. There will be a strong delegation of amateur players in the championship, headed by Chick Evans, Chicago's perfect golfer; Francis Ouimet, Boston; Jesse Sweetser, the amateur title holder,, and Bobby Jones of Atlanta.

The professional delegation is as strong as it can be without importing foreign talent. Sarazen, Hagen, Kirkwood and MacDonald Smith will be pressed by the following skillful golfers:

Jack Hutchison, Jim Barnes, Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel, Bill Mehlhorne, Bob McDonald, Jack Burke, Emmett French, Cyril Walker, Bobby Cruikshank, Bill Creavy and John Black.

Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones played together and drew a large gallery. Gene Sarazen was paired with Chick Evans.

SALESMAN A SUICIDE.

Columbus, July 13.—Ernest Hartman, 62, salesman, committed suicide by shooting himself through the abdomen with a revolver at his home. In ill health for more than a year, Hartman complained of feeling worse, and while his wife was next door calling a physician he shot himself, dying a short time later.

MANY NEW DOCTORS.

Columbus, July 13.—Ohio will have 160 new doctors as the result of the state medical examination of June, the state medical board announced. Only four failed to pass the regular examination and all of these were from schools outside of Ohio. Of the 15 applicants for the chiropractic examination, eight were successful.

BUNCOED BY ARTIST, HARDING ENJOYS IT.

President Harding enjoys being buncoed by "an artist who can skin you without your having felt it," but the crude workers who think they can "put something over" on him get on his nerves.

Just before leaving Washington for Alaska, it was revealed at the White House, the President made that confession in a letter to Colonel George B. Christian, of Marion, the father of the Secretary to the President.

It was back in the days when Editor Harding ran the Marion Star he felt proud to extend a loan to the stranger, who had all the appearances of a gentleman and represented himself to be a member of the Harding family, until he told the story of the stranger's call to his friend Judge Scofield, a leading citizen of Marion. The Judge told him that on the same day he had extended financial aid to a gentleman, who described himself as a distant cousin named "Scofield" from Virginia.

All the sting was taken from the incident for Mr. Harding and Judge Scofield a few days later when they learned that Myron T. Herrick, then a Cleveland business man, had fallen a victim to the same stranger.

"I am in receipt of your letter," President Harding wrote in reply, "in which you tell me of the call upon you by the breezy and companionable chap who, after the fashion of the gentleman who was named Harding one day, Scofield another and Herrick another day, took you in for a small loan which would accommodate him on his virtuous way. I can only sympathize with you. yet

Ju remember the chap who represented himself to me as a Hardrepr from 'Old Virginia,' and I recall that I presented him to you the and

He t that he took you in as well as me and that you and he fought p over some of the battlefields of the Civil War without your detecting any fraud in him; but you did escape being touched as I as for a small draft upon my cash account.

eac "In other words, when you are taken in it is a joy to be taken er t use so beautifully that you haven't the slightest knowledge of it until you come to the later realization that a promised loan is not returned. I do not know, but that it is a good thing that we have some of them in our midst at all times.

HYMNS, OLD AND NEW.

At the Christian Endeavor convention in Des Moines a speaker from Boston did not hesitate to assail certain hymns that have won a firm place for themselves in popular favor. "I've Reached the Land of Corn and Wine," was deprecated as a possible incitement to violation of the Volstead act. "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," has "no brains after the first line." Even "Onward, Christian Soldiers" was declared to be on probation, as perhaps an instigation to militarism.

It is not always the hymns that are most remarkable as examples of literature which have most endeared themselves to the multitude. The first appeal is that of the sentiment itself. Poets have failed where devout psalmodists of meager education and much devotion have been successful. Men who followed a trade or worked as artisans have been moved to sing, and their songs have lived because they came from the depths of life and not from the shallower foundation of literary artifice.

What makes a good hymn? The Boston speaker decries jazz; but the successful hymn has a strong element of the rhythmic and the dynamic. The tune is such as all can sing. It does not urge the untrained voice to inaccessible heights. It does not introduce florid elaboration in the melody. So much for the music. The words must express a universal longing. They must speak for an ardent faith. Amiable ambiguities will not serve.

The great hymns do not lean too hard upon adjectives—they are alive with verbs and vertebrate with nouns. What is true for secular songs is true for hymns; they must be such as the crowd can take in and give out again; they must seem true to the experience of the majority. No lettered, cultured censorship is the court of last resort in the choice of the hymns that shall survive. The immortality of a spiritual song depends on the democratic public and not on the aristocratic few.

BABIES NOT BARRED.

A lot of people would like to shake hands with the Wernersville man who advertised that he would rent his houses only to families with children, the bigger the family the lower the rate.

He loses money by the plan, of course, but it is worth it to point a badly needed moral to the country's landlords. Not that other owners of property could imitate the rather whimsical idea of taking off $5 for each extra child over his minimum of two. Nor even that landlords generally could bar out parents unable to show a brace of youngsters as a kind of "down money." But his philanthropy—it is nothing less—points out a condition especially prevalent in big cities which is doing a subtle injury to the Nation.

This is the reluctance which many property owners show to renting their dwellings or apartments to people who have children. This is so notoriously true that it is a stock vaudeville joke. Every young couple with babies has experienced the bleak finality of some agent's "I'm sorry, but the owner won't rent to families with children."

That's not true in every case, obviously, for families do find shelter. But common experience proves that it is true sufficiently often to add appreciably to the problems of living and raising a family. There can't be statistics compiled about it, but it is not illogical to infer that this prohibition has something to do with keeping down the birth rate.

To Can Blackberries or Blueberries by the Cold Pack Method.—Wash the berries and put them into hot, sterilized glass jars, then pour over them a hot, medium-thin sirup made by boiling three quarts of sugar and two quarts of water together for five minutes. Partially seal the jars (that is, put top wire up but do not press down side wire) and process the jar in your washboiler canner for 16 minutes in boiling water which rises almost to top of jar. Remove from canner, completely seal, cool out of a draught and store after inverting to test for leaks.

Blackberry Jelly.—Wash and mash freshly picked blackberries and put them into an agateware or enamelware kettle, cook slowly, adding no water, until they are tender, then turn them into a jelly bag and let drip till no more juice comes. Quarter two quarts of apples, not removing seeds, and stew these in the preserving kettle with only just enough water to keep from sticking to the bottom; when tender, drain and measure the juice. To every cupful of blackberry juice add one cup of the strained apple juice and bring to the boiling point; add an equal quantity of granulated sugar and boil until two drops will form at once on a spoon when a little of the juice is held high in the air and dripped back into the kettle. Turn at once into hot, sterilized glasses, let cool, then cover with melted paraffine.

Raspberry Jelly.—This may be made in the same way as the blackberry jelly, with an equal quantity of apple juice combined with the raspberry juice. Or currant juice may be used in place of the apple juice. If desired, commercial bottled pectin can be used with the raspberries to make jelly. (Follow directions which come with the bottled pectin.)

Gooseberry-Red Currant Jam—"Top and tail" three pounds of ripe red gooseberries and put them into a saucepan with one pound of stemmed red currants and three pounds of sugar; let stand five hours, then bring to the boiling point and boil for 30 minutes, stirring often. Turn into hot, sterilized glasses, cool and cover with melted paraffine. This makes a delicious jam.

THE MORNINGS OF CHILDHOOD

In the days of long ago
Youth's delights were ours to know
And our dreams were fair before us
And the hills were good to climb.
We were brave and we were strong
Neither pain nor grief nor wrong
Had left one blot of sorrow
On the register of time.
It was sweet to wake at morning
For the day was always new,
And the past was left behind us
With the night we'd slumbered through.

In the days of long ago
We could gayly come and go,
We could race the fruitful orchard
Or go trudging down the lane,
We could wander left or right,
Light of heart from dawn till night.
For we had not met with failure,
Had not heard the voice of gain;
Then no scorn or censure waited
At the ending of our play,
And our little wrongs at nighttime
Were all gently washed away.
Now men look on us as wise
And there's sorrow in our eyes,
On our cheeks the lines of trial
Have been permanently traced.
Much we've suffered, much we've learned,
And our souls are seared and burned
And the memory of our failings
Is not easily erased.
Now the sunny mornings call us
As they called us long ago,
But we awake to wordly wisdom
And the memory of woe.

To the ribbons of the past
We are tied and tethered fast,
To life's cares and griefs and burdens
We are slaves forevermore.
Not as children now, but men,
Morning calls us back again
To the tasks we've left unfinished
And the tasks which lie before.
We have looked on pain and felt it,
We have worshiped fame and gold,
And we find each glad new morning
Has been tainted by the old.

Today's Talk

THRILLS

There are those whose blood would boil and whose eyes would pop with excitement over a dog fight or a runaway horse, or some spectacular fire—who would let a perfect moon, in a setting of clustered stars, shine its heart out without a single throb within their human being.

Stevenson, in one of his delightful essays, tells of his excitement and happiness as he would sit of an evening with one of his favorites and find the hours soon "enlivened with such a clatter of horse-shoes, and such a rattle of musketry, and such a stir of talk."

The fact is that we select our thrills. Few of them come to us. If we want them, we must make them.

How many lives there are that are a veritable network of thrills. The late Theodore Roosevelt was a bundle of thrills unto himself—and he thrilled his nation and the world as well, and got the fun of a boy out of it.

Much of all that we are is but a state of mind, after all. We think ourselves into success and happiness.

We get the things that we want more than anything else in the world because we keep wanting them. And when we have wanted them hard enough, we either get them, or we aren't worthy of them anyway—and so miss out.

Burns was thrilled over the flower that looked up at him from his feet as he walked through the meadow, and over the field mouse that the plough released from its nest.

And who is there who is worthy or keen enough to catch the thrills that Keats and Shelley garnered to themselves?

A MARGIN FOR OVERLOAD

Is Present in Every Good Machine and in Every Business Organization of Stability. Yet the Wise User Avoids Calling Upon It.

The 10-ton crane will for a while lift 15 tons. The five-ton motor truck will for a while carry seven or eight tons. But the wise user knows that it is better to avoid continuous overloading.

So it is with money. The dollar can be overworked. During brief periods it can be forced to yield more than a safe, economic rate. But the wise owner of money knows it is better to ask for only a safe yield, a yield that may be accepted with no misgivings, a yield that requires no continuous argument to prove that it is justifiable.

FIRPO, WINNER OVER WILLIARD MAY MEET DEMPSEY LABOR DAY

New York, July 13.—Tex Rickard will offer Jack Dempsey a match with Luis Firpo, the batttle to be staged either at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, or under agreement with the fight clubs holding concessions to the Polo Grounds or the Yankee Stadium in New York, Rickard announced today.

Failing to get Dempsey into the ring with Firpo on Labor Day, Rickard said he would make every effort to have the Argentine mauler meet Harry Wills, Negro havyweight.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, believes Wills, not Firpo the next logical opponent for Dempsey.

Jersey City, N. J., July 13.—That hairy, scowling, throw-back to the days of the cave men that they call "the wild bull of the pampas," clubbed old Jess Willard to the floor in the eighth round of their fight at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, last night.

Old Jess fell only after a gallant stand, a stand so gallant it won the hearts of 100,000 people, the biggest crowd that ever assembled in an enclosure at a sporting event in America, a stand that had them chanting in unison: "Come on Jess!"

Old Jess came on just as far as he could, but when he fell 41 merciless years fell on top of him. The iron fists of Luis Angel Firpo, the strange man from the Argentine, had been thudding incessantly against Willard's portly body for seven rounds.

In the seventh one punch with all of Firpo's bulk swinging behind it, landed in the pit of Willard's stomach. It was a sickening punch. Willard's great face contorted with pain; he half stumbled as he walked back to his corner at the close of the round.

As the bell rang for the eighth, however, old Jess stepped forward, trying to make the step seem brisk and with him went the hearts of the great throng packed into the arena. 'Come on, Jess!" came the chant, thundering out of the blackness beyond the glare of the big lamps. The old boy, "came on" gallantly but the sickness from that seventh round punch was still on him.

The Finish.

Now the "wild bull of the pampas" rushed, head down, fairly snorting, his gloved fists flying before him like the "bolas" of his native Argentine. Willard jabbed at him with a long left from which the power was gone. Firpo pushed forward, throwing his head back until his black hair was a-toss. He rushed against Willard with such force that big Jess fell towards the ropes. Firpo's fists were flying at the broad body before him, then when the round had gone about a minute and fifty-five seconds, Firpo flung a high right that landed with an impact you could have heard ten yards away against Willard's jaw.

The blow staggered the mighty frame of the old ex-champion of the world. His knees bowed. Then Firpo began clubbing again and again at Willard's face and jaw with his right until Willard finally slipped to one knee on the floor. One hand was holding tightly to a rope strand as he went down and Henry Lewis, the referee, began counting over him. He was counted out in that position. It is true Willard might have gotten up, before the finish of the count, but he would have been clubbed down again. Perhaps he felt he had gone far enough—certainly he must have realized he could go no farther.

He was not hurt. His body was red from the hammering it had received and his face was little bloody, one ear was mangled. These are minor injuries in ring warfare. "That's the last one," he mumbled as he disappeared in the crowd. Firpo, the winner, received the cheers of the crowd without a smile, then he, too, disappeared from view, the ring was cleared and another bout went on.

Willard's weight was 242 and Firpo's 214.

Willard made an astonishing showing until he got that smash in the stomach in the seventh. "The wild bull of the Pampas" was by no means as wild as he has been in some of his bouts. The old ex-champion held him off with a long left, survived some of his fiercest smashes, and outboxed and outfought him in a couple of rounds.

This was between Floyd Johnson of Iowa, whose defeat at the hands of Willard gave Willard this last time on the pugilistic earth, and Jack McAuliffe of Detroit, beaten by Firpo at the milk fund show. Only a minute and a few seconds of the first round had elapsed when Johnson nailed Mc Auliffe with a right hand to the chin and down went the slim, dark-haired boy from Detroit.

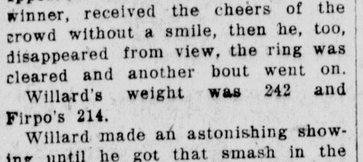

"Tiny" Jim Herman of Omaha and Cliff Kramer of California fought eight fierce rounds. Herman weighed

REDS STRENGTHEN THEIR POSITION BY DEFEATING PHILS

The Reds are surely playing ball with one foot in the gravy these halcyon days.

While the Moranites are picking the white meat and strengthening their newly-gained second place position, the Pittsburghers are getting gum boils trying to bite off the pesky New Yorkers.

The situation is delightfully dramatic and to the liking of bugs in this corner of the universe. The Cincinnati outfit fell into a rare turn of luck through the maneuvers of the schedule makers. Just at the crucial time the season's program threw them in the soft nest provided by the lowly Phillies while the ambitious Pirates were engaged in mortal combat with the league leaders.

If the Reds had to play the Phillies all season they would have had their names embroidered on the penant some time ago. In eight starts this season the Quakers have failed to come away with a victory. Weinert gave them a fighting chance Thursday when he held the Redlegs to but six safeties but he was unfortunately pitted against Luque who raised the ante on the Phillie hurler by permitting but three hits. Even a six hit hurler can't win if the Cuban bears down hard enough.

In the meantime Pittsburg has had its fingers in the throat of John McGraw's hirelings, but has only managed to pinch off one victory in three grabs at the New Yorker's tonsils. New York's victory Wednesday put the Reds in second position while they increased their slender lead Thursday by winning while Bill McKechnie's outfit was dividing a double header in the metropolis.

If the Reds can stand the pace against the Pirates and Cubs, their toughest rivals this season, their penant dream will be realized. The Moranites are not afraid of New York. In the series with the McGraw athletes to date, New York has come off second best and if the Reds can shake off the Pittsburghers they are willing to take their chances with New York.

SARAZEN WILL HAVE REAL OPPOSITION IN RACE FOR TITLE

Inwood Country Club, Far Rock away, N. Y. July 13—The fight for fame and fortune which will go with the winning of the open golf championship of the United States, started today with a carefully selected field of professional and amateur players seeking the title.

Gene Sarazen, winner last year at Skokie, will have opposition this year to retain his title. Walter Hagen, Joe Kirkwood, MacDonald Smith, and a host of others are after the crown.

The qualifying tests which covered a period of four days did not prove anything remarkable. Practically all of those expected to qualify, lived up to expectations. There will be a strong delegation of amateur players in the championship, headed by Chick Evans, Chicago's perfect golfer; Francis Ouimet, Boston; Jesse Sweetser, the amateur title holder,, and Bobby Jones of Atlanta.

The professional delegation is as strong as it can be without importing foreign talent. Sarazen, Hagen, Kirkwood and MacDonald Smith will be pressed by the following skillful golfers:

Jack Hutchison, Jim Barnes, Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel, Bill Mehlhorne, Bob McDonald, Jack Burke, Ernett French, Cyril Walker, Bobby Cruikshank, Bill Creavy and John Black.

Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones played together and drew a large gallery. Gene Sarazen was paired with Chick Evans.

WILL FIX GRADE ON EXTENSION OF NORTH KING STREET

An ordinance fixing grades on the extension of North King Street in the Hudson Plat and on Harbine Avenue in the same sub-division was placed on its first reading by the City Commission, Thursday night.

The ordinance was drawn up on request of A. C. Garwood, architect and builder. He plans to erect one or more houses on North King Street in the new addition, he said. The ordinance was also requested by Isaac Friedman, who owns propert on Harbine avenue. Both anticipate construction of sidewalks after the grade is provided. W. F. Foster and Edward Grabne, Dayton engineers employed by the city, have prepared the grade.

An ordinance providing the assessments to pay for the recently completed North Detroit Street paving was before the city commission also Thursday night. The ordinance provides for the collection of $25,969.92 in special assessments to cover the cost of the work. The immediate cost was taken care of by bonds issued by the city in anticipation of the collection of assessments.

The assessments may be made in full any time before the second Monday in September. At that time the assessments will be certified over to the County Auditor for collection in nine annual installments. The cost of the paving to property owners was $6.91.6 for each front foot.

ZONING ORDINANCE UPHELD.

Youngstown, O., July 13.—Judge Lyons in common pleas court upheld the city's zoning ordinance and dissolved a temporary injunction prohibiting the city from stopping the erection of an apartment building.

WIDOW FILES SUIT FOR BIG DAMAGES IN LOCAL COURT

Suit for $50,000 damages as the outgrowth of the explosion of a boiler of a freight locomotive on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near Trebeins last fall was filed in Common Pleas Court Friday morning, by Lola S. Brown, as administratrix of the estate of Charles A. Brown, deceased, 22 Sanders Court, Dayton, Ohio, against The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, Dayton, Ohio.

Two causes of action are cited in the petition, the plaintiff asking $30,000 damages under the first cause, which charges negligence and $20,000 in the second cause, which recites the same complaint and is asked as damages compensatory for pain and suffering caused the decedent.

The complainant declares her husband was a freight brakeman in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad on a train traveling between Dayton and Wellston Nov. 20, 1922. She declares that it was necessary as a part of his duties to be on the locomotive after the train had passed through Trebeins, about 1:30 in the morning, and that the boiler of the locomotive exploded throwing water and steam on the decedent hurling him through the air and causing severe injuries from which he died December 7,1922.

The plaintiff charges the explosion and the injuries received by her husband were caused by negligence, in that the boiler was maintained in an unsafe, improper, insecure, dangerous defective and insufficient condition. The petition declares the boiler was negligently permitted to become coated with mud and scale, causing the crown sheet, side sheets and staples to become burned and insecure: that there was insufficient water in the boiler causing the crown sheet, side sheets and staples to become burned and insecure; that the boiler did not have sufficient strength to resist the steam pressure from within and that the engineer and firemen negligently failed to keep water in the boiler.

The petition avers the decedent had an earning capacity of $200 a month, and was the sole support of the plaintiff. She asks $30,000 under this action. The second cause of action recites the same charges and declares the decedent was conscious until his death, that he was burned all over the body, his right arm crushed from the elbow to the wrist, all his teeth knocked out, both eet badly fractured and that he suffered great pain and anguish in mind and body. The plaintiff asks $20,000 under the cause of action as damages compensatory for the conscious pain and suffering of the decedent.

Davis V. Michel, of Minneapolis, Minn., and George R. Murray of Dayton, are attorneys for the plaintiff.

BUS OPERATORS ARE ORDERED TO APPEAR BEFORE CITY COURT

Clarence Stoner, owner and operator of the Dayton and Xenia Bus Company, and one of his drivers will be in Police Court, Saturday morning, to face charges, before Judge E. D. Smith, of infractions of city regulating ordinance.

The men were ordered into court after affidavits were filed with Judge Smith by Judge Marcus Shoup, attorney for the Dayton and Xenia Bus Company, an opposition line operated as a subsidiary of the Springfield and Xenia Southern Railway Company.

Three affidavits were filed in Police Court. They charge Stoner with operating four interurban busses and not paying license fees for two, with operating on West Market street instead of West Main street in violation of an ordinance and in operating his busses for taxicab service without paying for a taxi license. Police checked up on the affidavit and the company operated its busses on Market instead of Main streets, Friday morning. They said two busses left Xenia by way of Market street and one by way of Main street. Similar affidavits were presented to the City Commission Thursday night by Judge Shoup. The ordinances alleged to have been violated carry penalties involving heavy fines and the possibility of revocation of licenses by the City Manager.

Police have advised Stoner and his driver to be in Police Court Saturday morning.

CASE MAY CAUSE CHANGES IN SYSTEM

Columbus, Ohio July 13.— Growing out of the mysterious disappearance of Rev. Frederick W. Gordon, Franklin pastor, who is sought on charges of having issued worthless drafts, a state reform may come about.

Detectives working on the case learned he was paid various sums by the state for rehabiliation work for the state educational department. Through this means the detectives hoped to get finger prints of the missing minister. It was learned, however that the state does not keep finger prints of its employes as does the Federal Government. Detectives suggested this would be a valuable thing for the state to do. Massachusetts now has the identification system. Banks and business houses have found it very valuable.

In two other cases recently arisen where finger prints would be valuable in identifying the cluprits who took away large quantities of state [illegible] from the State Fair grounds. AMUNDSEN IS ON HIS WAY NORTH

These photographs, just received from the polar expedition of Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, shows him "mushing" one of his dog teams along the coastline of the Behring Sea, on his way to Wainwright. She states that the mountain breezes are refreshing and the scenery beautiful beyond description.

Indications are that this will be a record breaking tourist season in The Land of the Sky. It is expected that at least 12,000 tourists will have their headquarters in Asheville during the summer season.

He is survived by his wife, who was before marriage Miss Minnie Harper, of this city and by one daughter, Helen. Mr. Stebbins had many friends in this city whom he frequently visited.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at half past three o'clock from the Masonic Temple at Dayton and burial will be made in Woodland cemetery, Dayton.

GETS PLEASANT SURPRISE

"About 6 months ago my father was very sick with his stomach, which had been troubling him for several years. Three doctors said he had cancer and one said it was gall stones—all agreed an operation necessary, but on account of his age I was afraid to risk it. I told a friend about it who said his wife had been through the same trouble and had been cured by taking Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. It at once brought a bottle for father and he is now as strong as a bear and can eat more ham and cabbage than any 3 men." It removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at Sayre & Hemphill's and druggists everywhere. adv

COMMISSION DEFERS ACTION OF PROPOSED GAS RATE INCREASE

Action on the proposed ordinance fixing a 50 cent service charge on all subscribers of The Ohio Fuel Gas Co., in Xenia City was deferred until next meeting night by the City Commission Thursday night.

Considerable discussion led to the agreement to table the proposed ordistance for another two weeks. Judge H. L. Smith, president of the commission, proposed the delay pending an investigation of why city councils in Troy and Piqua passed the ordinance. On motion of Commissioner S. M. McKay, seconded by Commissioner G. H. Hudson, the proposed ordinance was tabled for two weeks.

A report of an investigation made by City Solicitor J. A. Finney, marked the discussion of the ordinance. Five increased schedules for Xenia have been filed with the Utilities Commission by the company since the franchise expired, the report showed. Only four of these raised the domestic rate to consumers.

The first increase, June, 1916 increased the rate to 35 cents per thousand or 30 cents net, minus the usual discount. The second increase came May 1, 1917 when the rate was jumped to 40 cents or net 35 cents. October 3, 1917 a new schedule was placed in effect not changing the rate to domestic consumers but affecting only the manufacturers.

The third domestic increase came January 10, 1920, when the rate jumped to 45 cents or 40 cents net. March 25, 1921, the rate was jumped to 50 cents gross or 45 cents net. All were obtained before the State Utilities Commission. The rate effected in March, 1921, is now in use here. There are now 2421 consumers in the corporate limits, it was shown. The service charge will increase the company income $6 a year for each subscriber or $14,526.

City Solicitor Finney told the commissioners that if the proposed ordinance is turned down by the commission, the company can immediately go before the State Utilities Commission with an increased rate schedule. The city would then have 30 days in which to protest. If there is no protest the the rate becomes effective immediately. If the city should protest the old rate would prevail for 120 days from the time of the filing of the new schedule. At the end of that time the Company would have the right to charge the increase pending the outcome of the litigation.

There would be a hearing before the Utilities Commission, and an appraisal of the company properties to determine if the company now has a fair rate of income considering the capital invested. Either side in event the decision is against it may go directly to the State Supreme Court.

The proposed ordinance would place a flat service charge of 50 cents on all meters. It would eliminate a minimum charge of 50 cents now collected. Thus the consumer of 1,000 feet of gas monthly would be subject to a 95 cent charge, including the discount.

Company officials say the cost of giving service, carrying and billing a subscriber only using 1,000 feet of gas monthly is more than the profit on 45 cents worth of gas. They ask the increase to pay the cost of the extra bookkeeping at $14,526 a year is exbookkeping at $14,526 a year is expensive.

Styles BY LENORE

If you are one of those who hold no brief against a thing you like merely because it has become popular, here is a suggestion for a delightfully cool and comfortable frock to pack into your grip for the week-end jaunt.

It is a model I have seen a great many smart-looking girls wear in New York. And it is equally charming in any of the shades that are liked this year, almond green, white edging the hem of the skirt, the pleated frills and the belt. The treatment of this feature incidentally, is extremely individual.

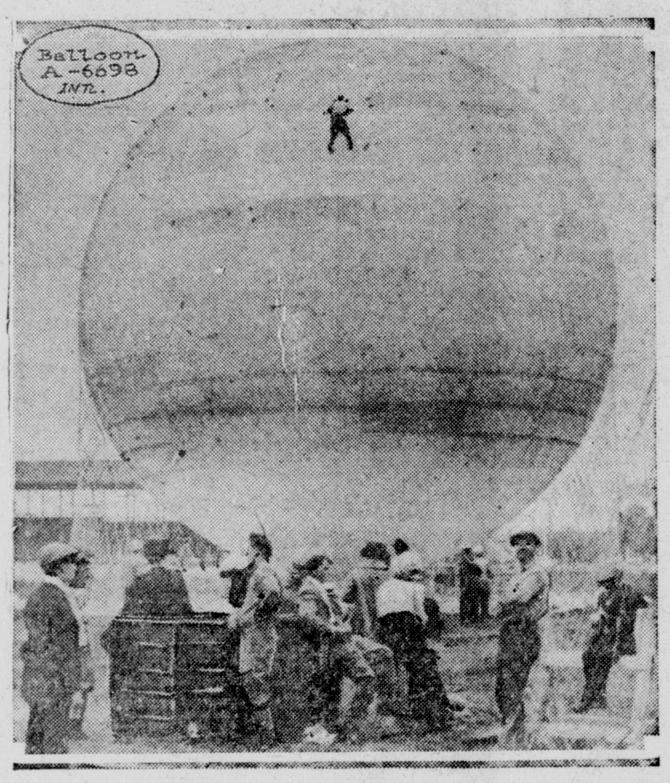

I have also seen this frock in black with white accessories, and with a white bodice surmounting a colored skirt.

WHISTLES FOR TEN HOURS.

Paris, July 13.—The world's whistling record is held by Jules Reynier, a young business man of Traus, near Marseilles. Reynier whistled continuously for 10 hours and 1 minute. A workman named Varois, in the contest with Reynier, whistled for eight hours. Neither of them ate during the contest, but Reynier drank beer while he whistled 81 consecutive tunes, all different, ending with the Marseillaise.

THE MISFIT

By Jane Phelps

A TROUBLED CONSCIENCE

Chapter XLV

Harper had said that Natalie was wheeling a young babe, said in a way that implied suspicion—but—suspicion of what? Horace thrilled at the thought that perhaps he was a father, that Natalie because of his— his mother's actions—had kept her expectations to herself, not realizing her unfairness to him, who so wanted children. But if it were his child—if—it were—why did Harper speak in that sneering voice? And if not his—whose?

"She was good," he said thinking of Natalie. "It must be my child." He recalled her modesty, her wholesome independence. His faith in her came back to him, but with an increased anxiety to find her. He haunted the street upon which Harper said he saw her, but now that she was searching for work all the morning and striving to assist Etta in the afternoon she did no go so far afield when she took the baby for an airing. So Horace watched in vain.

He wrote his mother, saying nothing of what Harper had told him save that he had heard Natalie was in New York, that he was searching for her.

One afternoon he ran into Beverly Rainsford. He had kept away from his own and his mother's friends since his return. He had two reasons. One their questions.

"Horace" Beverly said after greeting had been exchanged, "will you tell me about Natalie? Have you and she separated?"

'No—", then urged by her look of sympathy, Horace told her sparing himself not at all, but glossing over lightly his mother's attitude toward his wife.

"I drove her away, Beverly, just as surely as if I had told her to go. I was neglectful, she was lonely, alone in that house. I quarrelled with her, said things I would give my life to unsay. The poor girl had no recourse. I alone am to blame."

"Do you know where she is?" Beverly asked.

"No, I came back from Europe to find her, but havent succeeded yet I shall never give up until I do."

'Naturally, Natalie never liked me, Horace, perhaps because your mother showed her preference for me too plainly. I would have been friends with her, but I didn't know how. She seemed always to repulse me—not by what she said but by her manner. I saw her one day—I tried to catch up with her, but in some way she evaded me. I think she saw me, that she ran from me."

"Where did you see her?" Hope again springing into life.

Beverly told him, but they both decided it not much of a clue, as Natalie had been simply hurrying along the street.

'Have you questioned her friends—those she knew before you were married" she asked.

"Before I went away, yes. Not since."

"Do so, Horace. And if I can help in any way let me know. I should like to see you happy, you and Natalie; she is too lovely to be alone and lonely," Beverly said as she left Horace, thinking how old and worn he looked.

"If only Natalie had know Beverly wanted to be friendly it might have helped her—helped us all," Horace murmured as he watched her car disappear. Yet he felt happier after this encounter Beverly had spoken nicely of Natalie, praised her beauty, spoke of wanting to be her friend, perhaps if it were not too late, they might still be friends— some day.

If it should be too late!

This thought drove Horace Crandell almost mad. He had won the girl he loved, who loved him, then had gone his way, thinking just being his wife enough to satisfy her. She was so young and so lovely. What a fatuous fool he had been.

His life-long habit of giving his spare time to his mother, to the exclusion of all else, had been unfair to Natalie. He recalled how she had sat apart while he and his mother played chess, scarcely speaking or being spoken to; or spending the evening alone in her room while they amused themselves.

If an uneasy conscience is punishment, then Horace Crandell was surely being punished in the days he searched for his wife.

OFFICIALS SAY COURT INJUNCTION WILL TEND TO PREVENT RAIL TEUP

Despite Protestations of Organized Labor That U. S. Bench Has Exceeded Its Authority, Department of Justice Say Ruling Will Eliminate Tieup.

Washington, July 13—Despite the protestations of organized labor that the United States Court at Chicago has no authority to go outside its jurisdiction, (the northern district of Illinois,) in restraining railroad shopmen from striking, thus interfering with interstate commerce, the official opinion was expressed at the Department of Justice today that the sweeping injunction granted the government in Chicago will serve to prevent another nation-wide transportation tieup.

Labor leaders continued today to challenge the right of the government to obtain in a court order in one udicial district which is applicable to the entire country and expressed the opinion that the injunction obtained by Attorney General Daugherty in Illinois would not prevent further railroad strikes.

At the Department of Justice, however, it was stated that the Attorney General firmly believed that the judgment of the court was sound and that there never again would be another extensive strike tying up interstate commerce.

"No strike," Mr. Daugherty declared in a telegram to the department from his home in Columbus, Ohio," can be conducted in this country with violence and vandalism without severe punishment to those who thus participate. The law in this regard is now forever settled."

Evidence of the extent to which railroads have thus far recovered from last summer's strike of shopmen was given today by the American Railway Association in announcing that the freight cars in use in the U. S., were in better condition on July 1, that at any time since December, 1920. Only 8.4 per cent of the cars were reportd to be in need of repair at the end of June.

Under the program adopted recantly in New York by the railroad executives, the number of "bad order" cars are to be reduced to five percent of the total by October 1, 1923.

SAYS CARDS ELL HER SHE WILL ESCAPE ELECTRIC CHAIR

Laughing loudly in her cell in Auburn (N. Y. State Prison, where she will be confined until taken to Sing Sing State Prison to be electrocuted for the murder of Frederick Schneider, wealthy New York contractor, with whom she lived and whom she convicted of murdering in his automobile, Mrs. Anna Buzzi declared to reporters she would never die in the chair. "I have asked the cards," she said. They told me at my trial I would be disappointed, but now they tell me I will get a new trial and that I will be freed."

COMMISSION DISAGREES ON MRS. STANNARD CASE HER REMOVAL TO STAND

Two Members of Body Give Opposite Opinions—Matron Thereby Loses Fight for Re-Instatement—May Be Carried to Civil Courts of State

Columbus, O., July 13.—Women of Ohio rallied to the defense of Mrs. Mae Stannard, former matron of the Girl's Industrial School at Delaware, today after a deadlock vote of the State Civil Service Commission had sustained the order of State Welfare Director Harper removing her from office.

Officials of the Ohio League of Women Voters and the State Federation of Women's Clubs, went into conference to decide what action would be taken.

A decision of the state supreme court in the case of the industrial commission of Ohio versus Common Pleas Judge Evans carried up from Franklin County in 1918, may end the chances of Mrs. Stannard for any further appeal according to legal authorities today.

This decision holds that "when the members of a commission of two fail to concur in an order disaffirming or modifying an order of removal, the order appealed from will stand as final in the removal proceedings."

Apparently this case is analogous to that in the Stannard matter, the civil service commission having deadlocked.

"The women of Ohio will go as far as possible to re-instate Mrs. Stannard as matron of the industrial school," was the announcement.

"Plans for carrying the case to the State Supreme Court, if necessary, are being made," continued the announcement.

Mrs. Stannard issued a brief statement:

"If the state of Ohio, by the vote of one man, can decide against me that is the state's responsibility," she said. "I came to this state backed by national welfare organizations and upon the invitation of the former director of public welfare.

"For thirteen months I gave the best I had. I was vindicated by the attorney general, women's organizations, newspapers and public opinion."

Director Harper declared in a statement to International News Service, that "no impartial court in the country could have done otherwise."

"However, I am greatly surprised at the split in the commission," he added. "The testimony at the hearing definitely substantiated our charges of neglect of duty, misfeasance in office and inefficiency."

In spite of the furore of activity inspired in women's political circles by the removal and action of the commission, Dr. Harper said he did not anticipate any political consequences.

The order of removal issued by Dr. Harper stands and Mrs. Stannard has lost her fight for re-instatement.

Rollin Swisher, Democratic member of the Civil Service Commission affirmed Director Harper's order of dismissal.

William S. Bundy, Republican member, voted to re-instate Mrs. Stannard.

Under the law, in case of a disagreement of the commission, equivalent to a deadlock, the dismissal order stands.

No statement was issued by the Civil Service Commission relative to the decision, aside from the mere vote of the two members.

Mrs. Stannard was removed about a month ago by the welfare director on charges of inefficiency. Soon after dismissal, Mrs. Stannard demanded a hearing before the Civil Service Commission in an effort at vindication.

The hearing was concluded Wednesday afternoon at Delaware.

Officers of the State Federation of Women's Clubs made a strong fight in Mrs. Stannard's behalf and welfare workers from many parts of the country were brought before the commission to tetstify.

Mrs. Stannard has openly charged that politics and personal malice were responsible for her removal.

FONR HOMES IN MINING TOWN DYNAMITED—NO ONE INJURED

Residence of Prominent Union Leader Damaged When Unknown Persons Set Off Charge of Explosive —Blame Grievance for Tragedy

Pittston, Pa., July 13—Four homes in this city, one that of Alex Campbell, leader of the insurgent element of the United Mine Workers of America in the Pittston district, and one of the foremost union leaders in Luzerne County, were dynamited within a period of fifteen minutes, starting at two o'clock this morning.

Front porches were blown into atoms and furniture was wrecked and persons thrown from their beds, but no one was injured.

The first explosion took place at the home of Campbell, the second a few moments later at the home of Charles Alba, the third at the home of Michael Dezalvo and the fourth at the home of Joseph Martinell.

Campbell is chairman of the general grievance committee of the Pennsylvania Coal Company and the Hillside Coal and Iron Company. He had just returned home yesterday from Atlantic City, where he was in attendance at the joint conference of the anthracite miners and mine owners, sitting to fix amicable agreement.

Campbell last presided at a meeting of the grievance committee and turned down the proposition to call a general strike in the Pittston district due to petty grievances existing at several of the Pennsylvania Coal Company's collieries.

CONSPIRACY IS AIMED AGAINST RUSSIAN CHIEFS

Overthrow of Lenine and Trotsky Plan of Rebel Forces

Berlin, July 13.—That the famous "cheka," the Russian secret police, have discovered a conspiracy almost within the soviet government itself for the overthrow of Lenine and Trotzky is the sensational news which the Vienna Journal claims to have received from Moscow.

It is alleged that Bela Kun, who was the head of the Hungarian Bolshevik regime at Budapest, together with Commander-in-Chief Gitis of the red army garrison at Petrograd, are the chief conspirators. Their plans, according to the newspaper, was to replace the executive committee, which runs the soviet government, with a directory of 12 members.

Bela Kun, it is said, organized the new communist party at Moscow, which is dissatisfied with the moderate tendencies of Lenine, who has made too many concessions to capitalism. This party asserts that the Russian people have lost confidence in Lenine and Trotzky, because of their faithlessness to the people of communism, and that, therefore, they must be replaced.

It is claimed that the conspiracy was practically ready for the signal when it was uncovered by the cheka. Bela Kun, it is alleged, fled and is said to be in hiding in the Ukraine. Gilis is reported to have been arrested in Petrograd.

A considerable portion of the German press is much worked up over an appeal to communists and radicals contained in a sensational display covering the entire first page of the "Rote Fahne," officials communist organ. This article is interpreted by other newspapers as calling directly for civil war in Germany.

"Cuno cabinet is bankrupt," read the headlines. "Internal and external crisis threaten with next few days to lead to acute catastrophe." "Cumulative information that all preparations are completed for separatists to proclaim Rhenish Westphalian independent buffer state."

The paper then alleges if the movement occurs the Bavarian fascisti will separate Bavaria from the rest of Germany and charges that General Ludendorff and Adolph Hitler are ready to move northward toward Berlin and Hamburg, and that the reichswehr will joint the fascisti "to carry out Hugo Stinnes' program against the proletariat."

ENGLISH PEOPLE APPROVE STAND OF BALDWIN ON REPARATIONS

Note to Be Sent Germany Will Accept Latter's Suggestion for Commission to Inquire Into Nation's Economic Condition to Determine Position.

London, July 13—General approval but a noticeable lack of enthusiasm marks the reaction today to Premier Stanley Baldwin's statement of the British reparations policy.

Approval comes from the fact that England has at last made a move. The lack of enthusiasm is due to the uncertainty as to what the move constitutes.

Dissatisfaction is expected in two quarters. Lord Rothmere's papers express displeasure that the premier did not castigate Germany. The liberal press is displeased because it sees in the statement only the continued dragging out of negotiations with France.

Foreign office experts, it is learned, have already partially completed the draft of the British note to Germany that will be submitted to the allied nations for approval. It is not expected to be ready for transmission to the other powers, however, before Tuesday or Wednesday.

The note probably will accept in principle the German suggestion for a commission to inquire into Germany's economic condition and determine her capacity to pay.

The note will also suggest a revision of the guarantees submitted by Germany in her last reparations note and will suggest an end of passive resistance.

This will make it possible for France to join the negotiations without loss of dignity as Premier Poincare has repeatedly said he would not discuss reparations with Germany until passive resistance in the Ruhr was abandoned.

Thus the negotiations would result quickly, if France joins with England, in the lifting of the restrictions in the occupied area and remove the cause of chaos in Germany which Preimer Baldwin complained of in his statement.

It is also expected that the British note will suggest an international economic conference whose function it would probably be to discuss the interallied debts which Baldwin says is one of the causes of unrest in Europe.

The position of the British government was epitomized by Premier Baldwin in his speech in the house of commons as follows: "We hope the allies will join with us. If they don't, England will be forced to act independently.

In his long-awaited announcement Premier Baldwin closed the last door of hope that the differences between Great Britain and France would be amicably settled, as they have been so often before.

"France's course is endangering the peace of the world," Baldwin declared. "From the beginning we have made it clear that in our opinion the occupation of the Ruhr was not calculated to produce the maximum amount of reparations payment. Many of the consequences which were anticipated are in the course of fulfillment. Germany herself appears to be moving fast toward economic chaos.

"Opinion throughout Europe, and not the least in Great Britain, is becoming more sensitive to these conditions, with alarm at their continuance. The recovery of the world is in danger. Peace is at stake. Peace cannot be secured until three questions are settled. First, the payment of reparations; second, settlement of the interallied debts; and the third, the security of a pacified Europe."

UNITED STATES AND ENGLAUD IN ACCORD ON RUHR

French Government Greatly Disappointed in Premier's Statement

Washington, July 13.—One fact stood out above all else here today in the discussion revolving about Premier Stanley Baldwin's statement of the British attitude toward the French occupation of the Ruhr, namely, that the views of the United States and of Great Britain are practically identical.

Because this government has no official connection with the reparations no comment was forthcoming at the State Department as to the reaction of the administration toward Baldwin's speech, but the prime minister's outline of policy is known to be pleasing Secretary of State Hughes because it largely embraces the principles laid down by him at New Haven, Conn., on December 29, 1922.

In this speech, Secretary Hughes disapproved of the plans of Premier Poincare to speed up reparations payments by force of arms, although he held it to be necessary that Germany should pay to the limit of her capacity. Premier Baldwin's announcement of British policy embraced both of these principles, it was pointed out in official and diplomatic circles here today, thus indicating virtual harmony between Great Britain and the United States in their efforts to solve the reparations tangle.

The principal objective of both governments is the re-establishment of economic stability throughout the world, and both have made it plain that the reparations question is the root of all the trouble.

Until that problem, is solved to the satisfaction of all concerned, they see no hope for improvement elsewhere.

Paris, July 13.—The French government is greatly disappointed in Premier Stanley Baldwin's statement of England's reparation policy it was learned officially today, because of its condemnation of the Ruhr occupation and its failure to condemn passive resistance.

It is not expected it was said, that the proposals in the forthcoming British note to Germany will be any more acceptable to France than Bonar Law's proposal of last January.

FRENCH SOLDIERS OCCUPYING CITY AND IMPOSE SENTENCES

Officials Sent to Prison For Failure to Obey Invaders' Orders

Cologne, July 13.—French troops occupied Lemberg, 25 miles east of Coblenz. After the occupation the German officials were ordered to "carry on," but they refused and the posts, telegraph and telephone service were suspended.

The French court at Werden sentenced three burgomasters to prison for terms of three years and imposed fines of from 10 to 50 million marks. They were charged with disobedience to French orders.

Drastice sentences have been imposed at Buttrop, where two French soldiers were killed when their car crashed into a heavy stone in the road.

The Germans declare that in the six months of occupation the French have sent from the Ruhr only 1,000,000 tons of coal and coke, the same amount which was supplied in five days before occupation.

Ninety-two persons have been killed since the French troops entered Germany and 71,145 have been expelled from the Ruhr and Rhineland.

The French today after completely occupying Barmen, moved in the direction of Elberfeld, another highly important industrial center.

At Barmen, heavy forces occupied the town hall, the postoffice and telegraph offices and the Reichsbank. Other detachments took over the railroads.

The French disarmed the German police at Barmen.

In official circles here the occupation of Barmen and Elberfeld are interpreted as Premier Poincare's answer to England's criticism of the Ruhr venture.

MANY LIVES LOST AS TOWN FLOODED

San Salvador, July 13.—Many lives are believed to have been lost by the flooding of villages and towns on the Salvador-Guatemala border. The rivel Paz, Central America's largest stream, is running far out of its bank.

Property damage has been enormous and is spread over a great area.

Roads are impassable and little news has come from the stricken districts.

SALESMAN A SUICIDE.

Columbus, July 13.—Ernest Hartman, 62, salesman, committed suicide by shooting himself through the abdomen with a revolver at his home. In ill health for more than a year, Hartman complained of feeling worse, and while his wife was next door calling a physician he shot himself, dying a short time later.

THIRTEEN OHIO MAYORS UNDER FIRE OF STATE

Charged With Not Eliminating Law Violations On Communities

Columbus, O. July 13—Thirteen mayors of Ohio cities and towns were under probation today—Friday the thirteenth—because charges have been made to Governor Donahey that gambling, bootlegging and other law violations run rampant in their communities.

Emphatic warnings have been dispatched to the officials that unless a great improvement is noted immediately there may be some mayors looking for new jobs. A number of sheriffs also received notices from Governor Donahey that laws were made to enforce—not just for the legislature's amusement.

The last batch of officials notified to clean up their jurisdictions, included Samuel Orr, of Newark; Mayor Leslie Wycoff, of Shagrin Falls; Mayor W. V. Koons, of Chauncey; Mayor Thomas B. Alexander of Put in Bay and Sheriff Bob E. Wing, of Auglaize County, once Cincinnati baseball player.

TO DRILL ANOTHER WELL AT PLANT OF WATER DEPARTMENT

City Manager S. O. Hale and City Auditor T. H. Zell were authorized to drill another well at the plant of the municipal water department, Old Town by the City Commission Thursday night.

Authorization of the new well was made on the request of City Auditor Zell. The well will cost about $400 plus material which the department already has on hand but has no use for.

City Auditor Zell told commissioners that screens in the three wells now in use are becoming clogged with sand and gravel. He said it is impossible to shut down the wells in order to blow the screens and clean out the gravel. Such an operation would take a week, he said.

He said construction of another well would permit the employes to pump two wells to keep up the city supply while the other two were being cleaned. When a well is blown, city water at a pressure of 128 pounds is turned into it through a two-inch nozzle. The water forces sand out through the top of the well. The top is then closed and the water pressure again turned on blowing sand out of the screen at the bottom of the casing.

When the new well is constructed, all four will be used all the time, City Auditor Zell said. He believes such operation will cut down the power used, provide an extra water supply and furnish an emergency well when one or more needs cleaning or repairs.

There is now in circulation, both in coin and currency, $4,729,000,000. If this sum were divided among all of the 111,000,000 people of the United States, each one would have $42.51. That per capita wealth is 17 cents more than it was a month ago and is $2.65 more than a year ago.

OHIO CITY SWEPT BY SEVERE STORM

ATHENS, O. July 13—Friday the thirteenth found this city busy cleaning away the debris of the worst rain storm in its history. Several inches of rain fell last night within an hour and a half, many business houses were flooded, scores of automobiles stalled in the streets and cellars of hundreds of residences inundated.

Mechanicsburg, a town near here, lying along a small creek was, swept as by a tidal wave, and the property loss there is large. Train service in all directions is interrupted as wrecks to the east and north were caused by spreading tracks during the night.

ONE IS KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Huntsville, Ala., July 13.—One person was killed, another probably fatally injured and six others hurt when the westbound, Memphis special, crack train of the Southern railway, was derailed at Larkinsville, 40 miles west of here, early today.

One coach and five Pullman cars left the rails.

HARDING FAILS TO FIND READY SOLUTION OF A LASKAN PROBLEM

Aboard U. S. S. Henderson with President Harding in Alaska, July 13.—President Harding is not finding any readymade solution for Alaska's numerous problems. The president came to the northern territory hopeful of finding unified sentiment of Alaskans themselves as to what was wanted in the way of remedial legislative relief, but the week spent in cruising through southern Alaska where the chief industry is located, has failed utterly to reveal any such unity.

The various interests which make up industrial and business Alaska, principally fisheries and lumbering—are conflicting in their wants in almost as great a degree as there is difference of opinion in Washington concerning them.

Generally speaking, these interest want lesser restrictions in their operations but opposed to them is a considerable body of Alaskan public sentiment not in favor of giving big business too free a hand in exploiting Alaska's unrivalled resources.

CHARGE OPERATOR OF BUS LINE HAS VIOLATED RULING

Clarence S. Stoner, owner and operator of an interurban bus line known as the Dayton and Xenia Bus Company was charged with three offenses against city ordinances in affidavits presented to the City Commission Thursday night by Judge Marcus Shoup as counsel for the Dayton and Xenia Motor Bus Company a subsidiary of the Dayton, Springfield and Xenia Southern Railway Company.

Nine affidavits were presented the commission. They charge Stoner with operating four busses between here and Dayton instead of tow, as he specfied in his application for a license, and declare he is paying license fees for but two machines. They also charge that instead of following the specified bus route in and out of the city by way of West Main Street that he is using West Market Street as a thoroughfare. They charge further that instead of confining his operations to interurban bus lines that he also does taxicab service without a taxicab license.

Commissioners agreed to instruct City Manager S. O. Hale to see that the ordinances affecting these alleged infractions are enforced. The affidavits themselves it is expected will be taken before Police Judge E. Dawson Smith where formal charges will be filed against Stoner, it is said. Penalties on the different ordinances, said to have been disobeyed by Stoner carry fines not to exceed $100 for each offense, each day to consitute a separate offense and give the City Manager authority to revoke the license.

Only one affidavit was read to the commission. It was furnished by John Simison, agent at the Xenia terminal of the traction company. He declared that his company refused the request of a number of Xenia people to take a party to Hills and Dales by bus from Xenia on the ground that the company did not have a taxicab license. He alleges the party was accommodated in one of Stoner's busses. He alleges further that a Stoner bus operates each morning on West Market Street in violation of a city ordinance.

Judge Shoup told the commission evidence he has supports the charge the Stoner company has been operating four busses instead of two since May 27 and possibly before. City Manager Hale said Stoner had told him he intended to start using four busses July 1. He said Stoner promised to pay his license fees for four busses before July 10 but that the fees had not yet been paid.

Judge Shoup said the company he represents operates two busses all the time and a third part of the time, and pays a full license fee for all three. He told the commissioners his company only sought to make the opposition line conform to the same requirements followed by the company he represents in observance with the city ordinances.

The city ordinance fixes a fee for each bus operated each day. The owner certifies the number of busses he uses in making application for license. Another ordinance specifies the route to be followed by busses and another specifies that they shall be used for interurban passengers only. Taxicabs operate under a different ordinance and the fee is also separate.

Judge Shoup said Stoner was openly defying the bus ordinances and boasting of the fact. Stoner recently paid license fees for two busses up to July 1 after opposing the city bus ordinance since it became effective more than a year ago. In the meantime he had enjoined the city from collection.

He declared that his company refused the request of a number of Xenia people to take a party to Hills and Dales by bus from Xenia on the ground that the company did not have a taxicab license. He alleges the party was accommodated in one of Stoner's busses. He alleges further that a Stoner bus operates each morning on West Market Street in violation of a city ordinance.

Judge Shoup told the commission evidence he has supports the charge the Stoner company has been operating four busses instead of two since May 27 and possibly before. City Manager Hale said Stoner had told him he intended to start using four busses July 1. He said Stoner promised to pay his license fees for four busses before July 10 but that the fees had not yet been paid.

Judge Shoup said the company he represents operates two busses all the time and a third part of the time, and pays a full license fee for all three He told the commissioners his company only sought to make the opposition line conform to the same requirements followed by the company he represents in observance with the city ordinances.

The city ordinance fixes a fee for each bus operated each day. The owner certifies the number of busses he uses in making application for license. Another ordinance specifies the route to be followed by busses and another specifies that they shall be used for interurban passengers only. Taxicabs operate under a different ordinance and the fee is also separate.

Judge Shoup said Stoner was openly defying the bus ordinances and boasting of the fact. Stoner recently paid license fees for two busses up to July 1 after opposing the city bus ordinance since it became effective more than a year ago. In the meantime he had enjoined the city from collection.

BUNCOED BY ARTIST, HARDING ENJOYS IT.

President Harding enjoys being buncoed by "an artist who can skin you without your having felt it," but the crude workers who think they can "put something over" on him get on his nerves.

Just before leaving Washington for Alaska, it was revealed at the White House, the President made that confession in a letter to Colonel George B. Christian, of Marion, the father of the Secretary to the President.

It was back in the days when Editor Harding ran the Marion Star he felt proud to extend a loan to the stranger, who had all the appearances of a gentleman and represented himself to be a member of the Harding family, until he told the story of the stranger's call to his friend Judge Scofield, a leading citizen of Marion. The Judge told him that on the same day he had extended financial aid to a gentleman, who described himself as a distant cousin named "Scofield" from Virginia.

All the sting was taken from the incident for Mr. Harding and Judge Scofield a few days later when they learned that Myron T. Herrick, then a Cleveland business man, had fallen a victim to the same stranger.

"I am in receipt of your letter," President Harding wrote in reply, "in which you tell me of the call upon you by the breezy and companionable chap who, after the fashion of the gentleman who was named Harding one day, Scofield another and Herrick another day, took you in for a small loan which would accommodate him on his virtuous way. I can only sympathize with you. You remember the chap who represented himself to me as a Hard- from 'Old Virginia,' and I recall that I presented him to you and that he took you in as well as me and that you and he fought over some of the battlefields of the Civil War without your detecting any fraud in him; but you did escape being touched as I as for a small draft upon my cash account.

"In other words, when you are taken in it is a joy to be taken so beautifully that you haven't the slightest knowledge of it until you come to the later realization that a promised loan is not returned. I do not know, but that it is a good thing that we have some of them in our midst at all times.

HYMNS, OLD AND NEW.

At the Christian Endeavor convention in Des Moines a speaker from Boston did not hesitate to assail certain hymns that have won a firm place for themselves in popular favor. "I've Reached the Land of Corn and Wine," was deprecated as a possible incitement to violation of the Volstead act. "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," has "no brains after the first line." Even "Onward, Christian Soldiers" was declared to be on probation, as perhaps an instigation to militarism.

It is not always the hymns that are most remarkable as examples of literature which have most endeared themselves to the multitude. The first appeal is that of the sentiment itself. Poets have failed where devout psalmodists of meager education and much devotion have been successful. Men who followed a trade or worked as artisans have been moved to sing, and their songs have lived because they came from the depths of life and not from the shallower foundation of literary artifice.

What makes a good hymn? The Boston speaker decries jazz; but the successful hymn has a strong element of the rhythmic and the dynamic. The tune is such as all can sing. It does not urge the untrained voice to inaccessible heights. It does not introduce florid elaboration in the melody. So much for the music. The words must express a universal longing. They must speak for an ardent faith. Amiable ambiguities will not serve.

The great hymns do not lean too hard upon adjectives—they are alive with verbs and vertebrate with nouns. What is true for secular songs is true for hymns; they must be such as the crowd can take in and give out again; they must seem true to the experience of the majority. No lettered, cultured censorship is the court of last resort in the choice of the hymns that shall survive. The immortality of a spiritual song depends on the democratic public and not on the aristocratic few.

BABIES NOT BARRED.

A lot of people would like to shake hands with the Wernersville man who advertised that he would rent his houses only to families with children, the bigger the family the lower the rate.

He loses money by the plan, of course, but it is worth it to point a badly needed moral to the country's landlords. Not that other owners of property could imitate the rather whimsical idea of taking off $5 for each extra child over his minimum of two. Nor even that landlords generally could bar out parents unable to show a brace of youngsters as a kind of "down money." But his philanthropy—it is nothing less—points out a condition especially prevalent in big cities which is doing a subtle injury to the Nation.

This is the reluctance which many property owners show to renting their dwellings or apartments to people who have children. This is so notoriously true that it is a stock vaudeville joke. Every young couple with babies has experienced the bleak finality of some agent's "I'm sorry, but the owner won't rent to families with children."

That's not true in every case, obviously, for families do find shelter. But common experience proves that it is true sufficiently often to add appreciably to the problems of living and raising a family. There can't be statistics compiled about it, but it is not illogical to infer that this prohibition has something to do with keeping down the birth rate.

To Can Blackberries or Blueberries by the Cold Pack Method.—Wash the berries and put them into hot, sterilized glass jars, then pour over them a hot, medium-thin sirup made by boiling three quarts of sugar and two quarts of water together for five minutes. Partially seal the jars (that is, put top wire up but do not press down side wire) and process the jar in your washboiler canner for 16 minutes in boiling water which rises almost to top of jar. Remove from canner, completely seal, cool out of a draught and store after inverting to test for leaks.

Blackberry Jelly.—Wash and mash freshly picked blackberries and put them into an agateware or enamelware kettle, cook slowly, adding no water, until they are tender, then turn them into a jelly bag and let drip till no more juice comes. Quarter two quarts of apples, not removing seeds, and stew these in the preserving kettle with only just enough water to keep from sticking to the bottom; when tender, drain and measure the juice. To every cupful of blackberry juice add one cup of the strained apple juice and bring to the boiling point; add an equal quantity of granulated sugar and boil until two drops will form at once on a spoon when a little of the juice is held high in the air and dripped back into the kettle. Turn at once into hot, sterilized glasses, let cool, then cover with melted paraffine.

Raspberry Jelly.—This may be made in the same way as the blackberry jelly, with an equal quantity of apple juice combined with the raspberry juice. Or currant juice may be used in place of the apple juice. If desired, commercial bottled pectin can be used with the raspberries to make jelly. (Follow directions which come with the bottled pectin.)

Gooseberry-Red Currant Jam—"Top and tail" three pounds of ripe red gooseberries and put them into a saucepan with one pound of stemmed red currants and three pounds of sugar; let stand five hours, then bring to the boiling point and boil for 30 minutes, stirring often. Turn into hot, sterilized glasses, cool and cover with melted paraffine. This makes a delicious jam.

THE MORNINGS OF CHILDHOOD

In the days of long ago
Youth's delights were ours to know
And our dreams were fair before us
And the hills were good to climb.
We were brave and we were strong
Neither pain nor grief nor wrong
Had left one blot of sorrow
On the register of time.
It was sweet to wake at morning
For the day was always new,
And the past was left behind us
With the night we'd slumbered through.

In the days of long ago
We could gayly come and go,
We could race the fruitful orchard
Or go trudging down the lane.
We could wander left or right,
Light of heart from dawn till night.
For we had not met with failure,
Had not heard the voice of gain;
Then no scorn or censure waited
At the ending of our play,
And our little wrongs at nighttime
Were all gently washed away.
Now men look on us as wise
And there's sorrow in our eyes,
On our cheeks the lines of trial
Have been permanently traced.
Much we've suffered, much we've learned,
And our souls are seared and burned
And the memory of our failings
Is not easily erased.
Now the sunny mornings call us
As they called us long ago,
But we awake to wordly wisdom
And the memory of woe.

To the ribbons of the past
We are tied and tethered fast,
To life's cares and griefs and burdens
We are slaves forevermore.
Not as children now, but men,
Morning calls us back again
To the tasks we've left unfinished
And the tasks which lie before.
We have looked on pain and felt it,
We have worshiped fame and gold,
And we find each glad new morning
Has been tainted by the old.

Today's Talk

THRILLS

There are those whose blood would boil and whose eyes would pop with excitement over a dog fight or a runaway horse, or some spectacular fire—who would let a perfect moon, in a setting of clustered stars, shine its heart out without a single throb within their human being.

Stevenson, in one of his delightful essays, tells of his excitement and happiness as he would sit of an evening with one of his favorites and find the hours soon "enlivened with such a clatter of horse-shoes, and such a rattle of musketry, and such a stir of talk."

The fact is that we select our thrills. Few of them come to us. If we want them, we must make them.

How many lives there are that are a veritable network of thrills. The late Theodore Roosevelt was a bundle of thrills unto himself—and he thrilled his nation and the world as well, and got the fun of a boy out of it.

Much of all that we are is but a state of mind, after all. We think ourselves into success and happiness.

We get the things that we want more than anything else in the world because we keep wanting them. And when we have wanted them hard enough, we either get them, or we aren't worthy of them anyway—and so miss out.

Burns was thrilled over the flower that looked up at him from his feet as he walked through the meadow, and over the field mouse that the plough released from its nest.

And who is there who is worthy or keen enough to catch the thrills that Keats and Shelley garnered to themselves?

A MARGIN FOR OVERLOAD

Is Present in Every Good Machine and in Every Business Organization of Stability. Yet the Wise User Avoids Calling Upon It.

The 10-ton crane will for a while lift 15 tons. The five-ton motor truck will for a while carry seven or eight tons. But the wise user knows that it is better to avoid continuous overloading.

So it is with money. The dollar can be overworked. During brief periods it can be forced to yield more than a safe, economic rate. But the wise owner of money knows it is better to ask for only a safe yield, a yield that may be accepted with no misgivings, a yield that requires no continuous argument to prove that it is justifiable.

FIRPO, WINNER OVER WILLIARD MAY MEET DEMPSEY LABOR DAY

New York, July 13.—Tex Rickard will offer Jack Dempsey a match with Luis Firpo, the battle to be staged either at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, or under agreement with the fight clubs holding concessions to the Polo Grounds or the Yankee Stadium in New York, Rickard announced today.

Failing to get Dempsey into the ring with Firpo on Labor Day, Rickard said he would make every effort to have the Argentine mauler meet Harry Wills, Negro heavyweight.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, believes Wills, not Firpo the next logical opponent for Dempsey.

Jersey City, N. J., July 13.—That hairy, scowling, throw-back to the days of the cave men that they call "the wild bull of the pampas," clubbed old Jess Willard to the floor in the eighth round of their fight at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, last night.

Old Jess fell only after a gallant stand, a stand so gallant it won the hearts of 100,000 people, the biggest crowd that ever assembled in an enclosure at a sporting event in America, a stand that had them chanting in unison: "Come on Jess!"

Old Jess came on just as far as he could, but when he fell 41 merciless years fell on top of him. The iron fists of Luis Angel Firpo, the strange man from the Argentine, had been thudding incessantly against Willard's portly body for seven rounds.

In the seventh one punch with all of Firpo's bulk swinging behind it, landed in the pit of Willard's stomach. It was a sickening punch. Willard's great face contorted with pain; he half stumbled as he walked back to his corner at the close of the round.

As the bell rang for the eighth, however, old Jess stepped forward, trying to make the step seem brisk and with him went the hearts of the great throng packed into the arena. 'Come on, Jess!" came the chant, thundering out of the blackness beyond the glare of the big lamps. The old boy, "came on" gallantly but the sickness from that seventh round punch was still on him.

The Finish.

Now the "wild bull of the pampas" rushed, head down, fairly snorting, his gloved fists flying before him like the "bolas" of his native Argentine. Willard jabbed at him with a long left from which the power was gone. Firpo pushed forward, throwing his head back until his black hair was a-toss. He rushed against Willard with such force that big Jess fell towards the ropes. Firpo's fists were flying at the broad body before him, then when the round had gone about a minute and fifty-five seconds, Firpo flung a high right that landed with an impact you could have heard ten yards away against Willard's jaw.

The blow staggered the mighty frame of the old ex-champion of the world. His knees bowed. Then Firpo began clubbing again and again at Willard's face and jaw with his right until Willard finally slipped to one knee on the floor. One hand was holding tightly to a rope strand as he went down and Henry Lewis, the referee, began counting over him. He was counted out in that position. It is true Willard might have gotten up, before the finish of the count, but he would have been clubbed down again. Perhaps he felt he had gone far enough—certainly he must have realized he could go no farther.

He was not hurt. His body was red from the hammering it had received and his face was little bloody, one ear was mangled. These are minor injuries in ring warfare. "That's the last one," he mumbled as he disappeared in the crowd. Firpo, the winner, received the cheers of the crowd without a smile, then he, too, disappeared from view, the ring was cleared and another bout went on.

Willard's weight was 242 and Firpo's 214.

Willard made an astonishing showing until he got that smash in the stomach in the seventh. "The wild bull of the Pampas" was by no means as wild as he has been in some of his bouts. The old ex-champion held him off with a long left, survived some of his fiercest smashes, and outboxed and outfought him in a couple of rounds.

This was between Floyd Johnson of Iowa, whose defeat at the hands of Willard gave Willard this last time on the pugilistic earth, and Jack McAuliffe of Detroit, beaten by Firpo at the milk fund show. Only a minute and a few seconds of the first round had elapsed when Johnson nailed Mc Auliffe with a right hand to the chin and down went the slim, dark-haired boy from Detroit.

"Tiny" Jim Herman of Omaha and Cliff Kramer of California fought eight fierce rounds. Herman weighed

REDS STRENGTHEN THEIR POSITION BY DEFEATING PHILS

The Reds are surely playing ball with one foot in the gravy these halcyon days.

While the Moranites are picking the white meat and strengthening their newly-gained second place position, the Pittsburghers are getting gum boils trying to bite off the pesky New Yorkers.

The situation is delightfully dramatic and to the liking of bugs in this corner of the universe. The Cincinnati outfit fell into a rare turn of luck through the maneuvers of the schedule makers. Just at the crucial time the season's program threw them in the soft nest provided by the lowly Phillies while the ambitious Pirates were engaged in mortal combat with the league leaders.

If the Reds had to play the Phillies all season they would have had their names embroidered on the penant some time ago. In eight starts this season the Quakers have failed to come away with a victory. Weinert gave them a fighting chance Thursday when he held the Redlegs to but six safeties but he was unfortunately pitted against Luque who raised the ante on the Phillie hurler by permitting but three hits. Even a six hit hurler can't win if the Cuban bears down hard enough.

In the meantime Pittsburg has had its fingers in the throat of John McGraw's hirelings, but has only managed to pinch off one victory in three grabs at the New Yorker's tonsils. New York's victory Wednesday put the Reds in second position while they increased their slender lead Thursday by winning while Bill McKechnie's outfit was dividing a double header in the metropolis.

If the Reds can stand the pace against the Pirates and Cubs, their toughest rivals this season, their penant dream will be realized. The Moranites are not afraid of New York. In the series with the McGraw athletes to date, New York has come off second best and if the Reds can shake off the Pittsburghers they are willing to take their chances with New York.

SARAZEN WILL HAVE REAL OPPOSITION IN RACE FOR TITLE

Inwood Country Club, Far Rock away, N. Y. July 13—The fight for fame and fortune which will go with the winning of the open golf championship of the United States, started today with a carefully selected field of professional and amateur players seeking the title.

Gene Sarazen, winner last year at Skokie, will have opposition this year to retain his title. Walter Hagen, Joe Kirkwood, MacDonald Smith, and a host of others are after the crown.

The qualifying tests which covered a period of four days did not prove anything remarkable. Practically all of those expected to qualify, lived up to expectations. There will be a strong delegation of amateur players in the championship, headed by Chick Evans, Chicago's perfect golfer; Francis Ouimet, Boston; Jesse Sweetser, the amateur title holder,, and Bobby Jones of Atlanta.

The professional delegation is as strong as it can be without importing foreign talent. Sarazen, Hagen, Kirkwood and MacDonald Smith will be pressed by the following skillful golfers:

Jack Hutchison, Jim Barnes, Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel, Bill Mehlhorne, Bob McDonald, Jack Burke, Ernett French, Cyril Walker, Bobby Cruikshank, Bill Creavy and John Black.

Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones played together and drew a large gallery. Gene Sarazen was paired with Chick Evans.

SALESMAN A SUICIDE.

Columbus, July 13.—Ernest Hartman, 62, salesman, committed suicide by shooting himself through the abdomen with a revolver at his home. In ill health for more than a year, Hartman complained of feeling worse, and while his wife was next door calling a physician he shot himself, dying a short time later.

MANY NEW DOCTORS.

Columbus, July 13.—Ohio will have 160 new doctors as the result of the state medical examination of June, the state medical board announced. Only four failed to pass the regular examination and all of these were from schools outside of Ohio. Of the 15 applicants for the chiropractic examination, eight were successful.

BUNCOED BY ARTIST, HARDING ENJOYS IT.

President Harding enjoys being buncoed by "an artist who can skin you without your having felt it," but the crude workers who think they can "put something over" on him get on his nerves.

Just before leaving Washington for Alaska, it was revealed at the White House, the President made that confession in a letter to Colonel George B. Christian, of Marion, the father of the Secretary to the President.

It was back in the days when Editor Harding ran the Marion Star he felt proud to extend a loan to the stranger, who had all the appearances of a gentleman and represented himself to be a member of the Harding family, until he told the story of the stranger's call to his friend Judge Scofield, a leading citizen of Marion. The Judge told him that on the same day he had extended financial aid to a gentleman, who described himself as a distant cousin named "Scofield" from Virginia.

All the sting was taken from the incident for Mr. Harding and Judge Scofield a few days later when they learned that Myron T. Herrick, then a Cleveland business man, had fallen a victim to the same stranger.

"I am in receipt of your letter," President Harding wrote in reply, "in which you tell me of the call upon you by the breezy and companionable chap who, after the fashion of the gentleman who was named Harding one day, Scofield another and Herrick another day, took you in for a small loan which would accommodate him on his virtuous way. I can only sympathize with you. You remember the chap who represented himself to me as a Hard- from 'Old Virginia,' and I recall that I presented him to you and that he took you in as well as me and that you and he fought over some of the battlefields of the Civil War without your detecting any fraud in him; but you did escape being touched as I was for a small draft upon my cash account.

"In other words, when you are taken in it is a joy to be taken so beautifully that you haven't the slightest knowledge of it until you come to the later realization that a promised loan is not returned. I do not know, but that it is a good thing that we have some of them in our midst at all times.

HYMNS, OLD AND NEW.

At the Christian Endeavor convention in Des Moines a speaker from Boston did not hesitate to assail certain hymns that have won a firm place for themselves in popular favor. "I've Reached the Land of Corn and Wine," was deprecated as a possible incitement to violation of the Volstead act. "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," has "no brains after the first line." Even "Onward, Christian Soldiers" was declared to be on probation, as perhaps an instigation to militarism.

It is not always the hymns that are most remarkable as examples of literature which have most endeared themselves to the multitude. The first appeal is that of the sentiment itself. Poets have failed where devout psalmodists of meager education and much devotion have been successful. Men who followed a trade or worked as artisans have been moved to sing, and their songs have lived because they came from the depths of life and not from the shallower foundation of literary artifice.

What makes a good hymn? The Boston speaker decries jazz; but the successful hymn has a strong element of the rhythmic and the dynamic. The tune is such as all can sing. It does not urge the untrained voice to inaccessible heights. It does not introduce florid elaboration in the melody. So much for the music. The words must express a universal longing. They must speak for an ardent faith. Amiable ambiguities will not serve.

The great hymns do not lean too hard upon adjectives—they are alive with verbs and vertebrate with nouns. What is true for secular songs is true for hymns; they must be such as the crowd can take in and give out again; they must seem true to the experience of the majority. No lettered, cultured censorship is the court of last resort in the choice of the hymns that shall survive. The immortality of a spiritual song depends on the democratic public and not on the aristocratic few.

BABIES NOT BARRED.

A lot of people would like to shake hands with the Wernersville man who advertised that he would rent his houses only to families with children, the bigger the family the lower the rate.

He loses money by the plan, of course, but it is worth it to point a badly needed moral to the country's landlords. Not that other owners of property could imitate the rather whimsical idea of taking off $5 for each extra child over his minimum of two. Nor even that landlords generally could bar out parents unable to show a brace of youngsters as a kind of "down money." But his philanthropy—it is nothing less—points out a condition especially prevalent in big cities which is doing a subtle injury to the Nation.

This is the reluctance which many property owners show to renting their dwellings or apartments to people who have children. This is so notoriously true that it is a stock vaudeville joke. Every young couple with babies has experienced the bleak finality of some agent's "I'm sorry, but the owner won't rent to families with children."

That's not true in every case, obviously, for families do find shelter. But common experience proves that it is true sufficiently often to add appreciably to the problems of living and raising a family. There can't be statistics compiled about it, but it is not illogical to infer that this prohibition has something to do with keeping down the birth rate.

To Can Blackberries or Blueberries by the Cold Pack Method.—Wash the berries and put them into hot, sterilized glass jars, then pour over them a hot, medium-thin sirup made by boiling three quarts of sugar and two quarts of water together for five minutes. Partially seal the jars (that is, put top wire up but do not press down side wire) and process the jar in your washboiler canner for 16 minutes in boiling water which rises almost to top of jar. Remove from canner, completely seal, cool out of a draught and store after inverting to test for leaks.

Blackberry Jelly.—Wash and mash freshly picked blackberries and put them into an agateware or enamelware kettle, cook slowly, adding no water, until they are tender, then turn them into a jelly bag and let drip till no more juice comes. Quarter two quarts of apples, not removing seeds, and stew these in the preserving kettle with only just enough water to keep from sticking to the bottom; when tender, drain and measure the juice. To every cupful of blackberry juice add one cup of the strained apple juice and bring to the boiling point; add an equal quantity of granulated sugar and boil until two drops will form at once on a spoon when a little of the juice is held high in the air and dripped back into the kettle. Turn at once into hot, sterilized glasses, let cool, then cover with melted paraffine.

Raspberry Jelly.—This may be made in the same way as the blackberry jelly, with an equal quantity of apple juice combined with the raspberry juice. Or currant juice may be used in place of the apple juice. If desired, commercial bottled pectin can be used with the raspberries to make jelly. (Follow directions which come with the bottled pectin.)

Gooseberry-Red Currant Jam—"Top and tail" three pounds of ripe red gooseberries and put them into a saucepan with one pound of stemmed red currants and three pounds of sugar; let stand five hours, then bring to the boiling point and boil for 30 minutes, stirring often. Turn into hot, sterilized glasses, cool and cover with melted paraffine. This makes a delicious jam.

THE MORNINGS OF CHILDHOOD

In the days of long ago
Youth's delights were ours to know
And our dreams were fair before us
And the hills were good to climb.
We were brave and we were strong
Neither pain nor grief nor wrong
Had left one blot of sorrow
On the register of time.
It was sweet to wake at morning
For the day was always new,
And the past was left behind us
With the night we'd slumbered through.

In the days of long ago
We could gayly come and go,
We could race the fruitful orchard
Or go trudging down the lane,
We could wander left or right,
Light of heart from dawn till night.
For we had not met with failure,
Had not heard the voice of gain;
Then no scorn or censure waited
At the ending of our play,
And our little wrongs at nighttime
Were all gently washed away.
Now men look on us as wise
And there's sorrow in our eyes,
On our cheeks the lines of trial
Have been permanently traced.
Much we've suffered, much we've learned,
And our souls are seared and burned
And the memory of our failings
Is not easily erased.
Now the sunny mornings call us
As they called us long ago,
But we awake to wordly wisdom
And the memory of woe.

To the ribbons of the past
We are tied and tethered fast,
To life's cares and griefs and burdens
We are slaves forevermore.
Not as children now, but men,
Morning calls us back again
To the tasks we've left unfinished
And the tasks which lie before.
We have looked on pain and felt it,
We have worshiped fame and gold,
And we find each glad new morning
Has been tainted by the old.

Today's Talk

THRILLS

There are those whose blood would boil and whose eyes would pop with excitement over a dog fight or a runaway horse, or some spectacular fire—who would let a perfect moon, in a setting of clustered stars, shine its heart out without a single throb within their human being.

Stevenson, in one of his delightful essays, tells of his excitement and happiness as he would sit of an evening with one of his favorites and find the hours soon "enlivened with such a clatter of horse-shoes, and such a rattle of musketry, and such a stir of talk."

The fact is that we select our thrills. Few of them come to us. If we want them, we must make them.

How many lives there are that are a veritable network of thrills. The late Theodore Roosevelt was a bundle of thrills unto himself—and he thrilled his nation and the world as well, and got the fun of a boy out of it.

Much of all that we are is but a state of mind, after all. We think ourselves into success and happiness.

We get the things that we want more than anything else in the world because we keep wanting them. And when we have wanted them hard enough, we either get them, or we aren't worthy of them anyway—and so miss out.

Burns was thrilled over the flower that looked up at him from his feet as he walked through the meadow, and over the field mouse that the plough released from its nest.

And who is there who is worthy or keen enough to catch the thrills that Keats and Shelley garnered to themselves?

A MARGIN FOR OVERLOAD

Is Present in Every Good Machine and in Every Business Organization of Stability. Yet the Wise User Avoids Calling Upon It.

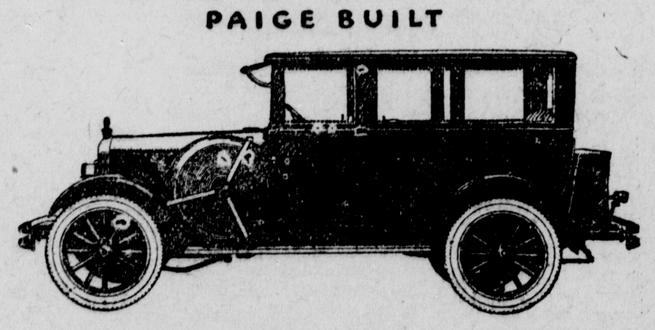

The 10-ton crane will for a while lift 15 tons. The five-ton motor truck will for a while carry seven or eight tons. But the wise user knows that it is better to avoid continuous overloading.

So it is with money. The dollar can be overworked. During brief periods it can be forced to yield more than a safe, economic rate. But the wise owner of money knows it is better to ask for only a safe yield, a yield that may be accepted with no misgivings, a yield that requires no continuous argument to prove that it is justifiable.

FIRPO, WINNER OVER WILLIARD MAY MEET DEMPSEY LABOR DAY

New York, July 13.—Tex Rickard will offer Jack Dempsey a match with Luis Firpo, the batttle to be staged either at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, or under agreement with the fight clubs holding concessions to the Polo Grounds or the Yankee Stadium in New York, Rickard announced today.

Failing to get Dempsey into the ring with Firpo on Labor Day, Rickard said he would make every effort to have the Argentine mauler meet Harry Wills, Negro havyweight.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, believes Wills, not Firpo the next logical opponent for Dempsey.

Jersey City, N. J., July 13.—That hairy, scowling, throw-back to the days of the cave men that they call "the wild bull of the pampas," clubbed old Jess Willard to the floor in the eighth round of their fight at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, last night.

Old Jess fell only after a gallant stand, a stand so gallant it won the hearts of 100,000 people, the biggest crowd that ever assembled in an enclosure at a sporting event in America, a stand that had them chanting in unison: "Come on Jess!"

Old Jess came on just as far as he could, but when he fell 41 merciless years fell on top of him. The iron fists of Luis Angel Firpo, the strange man from the Argentine, had been thudding incessantly against Willard's portly body for seven rounds.

In the seventh one punch with all of Firpo's bulk swinging behind it, landed in the pit of Willard's stomach. It was a sickening punch. Willard's great face contorted with pain; he half stumbled as he walked back to his corner at the close of the round.

As the bell rang for the eighth, however, old Jess stepped forward, trying to make the step seem brisk and with him went the hearts of the great throng packed into the arena. 'Come on, Jess!" came the chant, thundering out of the blackness beyond the glare of the big lamps. The old boy, "came on" gallantly but the sickness from that seventh round punch was still on him.

The Finish.

Now the "wild bull of the pampas" rushed, head down, fairly snorting, his gloved fists flying before him like the "bolas" of his native Argentine. Willard jabbed at him with a long left from which the power was gone. Firpo pushed forward, throwing his head back until his black hair was a-toss. He rushed against Willard with such force that big Jess fell towards the ropes. Firpo's fists were flying at the broad body before him, then when the round had gone about a minute and fifty-five seconds, Firpo flung a high right that landed with an impact you could have heard ten yards away against Willard's jaw.

The blow staggered the mighty frame of the old ex-champion of the world. His knees bowed. Then Firpo began clubbing again and again at Willard's face and jaw with his right until Willard finally slipped to one knee on the floor. One hand was holding tightly to a rope strand as he went down and Henry Lewis, the referee, began counting over him. He was counted out in that position. It is true Willard might have gotten up, before the finish of the count, but he would have been clubbed down again. Perhaps he felt he had gone far enough—certainly he must have realized he could go no farther.

He was not hurt. His body was red from the hammering it had received and his face was little bloody, one ear was mangled. These are minor injuries in ring warfare. "That's the last one," he mumbled as he disappeared in the crowd. Firpo, the winner, received the cheers of the crowd without a smile, then he, too, disappeared from view, the ring was cleared and another bout went on.

Willard's weight was 242 and Firpo's 214.

Willard made an astonishing showing until he got that smash in the stomach in the seventh. "The wild bull of the Pampas" was by no means as wild as he has been in some of his bouts. The old ex-champion held him off with a long left, survived some of his fiercest smashes, and outboxed and outfought him in a couple of rounds.

This was between Floyd Johnson of Iowa, whose defeat at the hands of Willard gave Willard this last time on the pugilistic earth, and Jack McAuliffe of Detroit, beaten by Firpo at the milk fund show. Only a minute and a few seconds of the first round had elapsed when Johnson nailed Mc Auliffe with a right hand to the chin and down went the slim, dark-haired boy from Detroit.

"Tiny" Jim Herman of Omaha and Cliff Kramer of California fought eight fierce rounds. Herman weighed

REDS STRENGTHEN THEIR POSITION BY DEFEATING PHILS

The Reds are surely playing ball with one foot in the gravy these halcyon days.

While the Moranites are picking the white meat and strengthening their newly-gained second place position, the Pittsburghers are getting gum boils trying to bite off the pesky New Yorkers.

The situation is delightfully dramatic and to the liking of bugs in this corner of the universe. The Cincinnati outfit fell into a rare turn of luck through the maneuvers of the schedule makers. Just at the crucial time the season's program threw them in the soft nest provided by the lowly Phillies while the ambitious Pirates were engaged in mortal combat with the league leaders.

If the Reds had to play the Phillies all season they would have had their names embroidered on the penant some time ago. In eight starts this season the Quakers have failed to come away with a victory. Weinert gave them a fighting chance Thursday when he held the Redlegs to but six safeties but he was unfortunately pitted against Luque who raised the ante on the Phillie hurler by permitting but three hits. Even a six hit hurler can't win if the Cuban bears down hard enough.

In the meantime Pittsburg has had its fingers in the throat of John McGraw's hirelings, but has only managed to pinch off one victory in three grabs at the New Yorker's tonsils. New York's victory Wednesday put the Reds in second position while they increased their slender lead Thursday by winning while Bill McKechnie's outfit was dividing a double header in the metropolis.

If the Reds can stand the pace against the Pirates and Cubs, their toughest rivals this season, their penant dream will be realized. The Moranites are not afraid of New York. In the series with the McGraw athletes to date, New York has come off second best and if the Reds can shake off the Pittsburghers they are willing to take their chances with New York.

SARAZEN WILL HAVE REAL OPPOSITION IN RACE FOR TITLE

Inwood Country Club, Far Rockaway, N. Y. July 13—The fight for fame and fortune which will go with the winning of the open golf championship of the United States, started today with a carefully selected field of professional and amateur players seeking the title.

Gene Sarazen, winner last year at Skokie, will have opposition this year to retain his title. Walter Hagen, Joe Kirkwood, MacDonald Smith, and a host of others are after the crown.

The qualifying tests which covered a period of four days did not prove anything remarkable. Practically all of those expected to qualify, lived up to expectations. There will be a strong delegation of amateur players in the championship, headed by Chick Evans, Chicago's perfect golfer; Francis Ouimet, Boston; Jesse Sweetser, the amateur title holder,, and Bobby Jones of Atlanta.

The professional delegation is as strong as it can be without importing foreign talent. Sarazen, Hagen, Kirkwood and MacDonald Smith will be pressed by the following skillful golfers:

Jack Hutchison, Jim Barnes, Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel, Bill Mehlhorne, Bob McDonald, Jack Burke, Ernett French, Cyril Walker, Bobby Cruikshank, Bill Creavy and John Black.

Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones played together and drew a large gallery. Gene Sarazen was paired with Chick Evans.

SALESMAN A SUICIDE.

Columbus, July 13.—Ernest Hartman, 62, salesman, committed suicide by shooting himself through the abdomen with a revolver at his home. In ill health for more than a year, Hartman complained of feeling worse, and while his wife was next door calling a physician he shot himself, dying a short time later.

MANY NEW DOCTORS.

Columbus, July 13.—Ohio will have 160 new doctors as the result of the state medical examination of June, the state medical board announced. Only four failed to pass the regular examination and all of these were from schools outside of Ohio. Of the 15 applicants for the chiropractic examination, eight were successful.

WILL FIX GRADE ON EXTENSION OF NORTH KING STREET

An ordinance fixing grades on the extension of North King Street in the Hudson Plat and on Harbine Avenue in the same sub-division was placed on its first reading by the City Commission, Thursday night.

The ordinance was drawn up on request of A. C. Garwood, architect and builder. He plans to erect one or more houses on North King Street in the new addition, he said. The ordinance was also requested by Isaac Friedman, who owns propert on Harbine avenue. Both anticipate construction of sidewalks after the grade is provided. W. F. Foster and Edward Grabne, Dayton engineers employed by the city, have prepared the grade.

An ordinance providing the assessments to pay for the recently completed North Detroit Street paving was before the city commission also Thursday night. The ordinance provides for the collection of $25,969.92 in special assessments to cover the cost of the work. The immediate cost was taken care of by bonds issued by the city in anticipation of the collection of assessments.

The assessments may be made in full any time before the second Monday in September. At that time the assessments will be certified over to the County Auditor for collection in nine annual installments. The cost of the paving to property owners was $6.91.6 for each front foot.

ZONING ORDINANCE UPHELD.

Youngstown, O., July 13.—Judge Lyons in common pleas court upheld the city's zoning ordinance and dissolved a temporary injunction prohibiting the city from stopping the erection of an apartment building.

WIDOW FILES SUIT FOR BIG DAMAGES IN LOCAL COURT

Suit for $50,000 damages as the outgrowth of the explosion of a boiler of a freight locomotive on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near Trebeins last fall was filed in Common Pleas Court Friday morning, by Lola S. Brown, as administratrix of the estate of Charles A. Brown, deceased, 22 Sanders Court, Dayton, Ohio, against The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, Dayton, Ohio.

Two causes of action are cited in the petition, the plaintiff asking $30,000 damages under the first cause, which charges negligence and $20,000 in the second cause, which recites the same complaint and is asked as damages compensatory for pain and suffering caused the decedent.

The complainant declares her husband was a freight brakeman in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad on a train traveling between Dayton and Wellston Nov. 20, 1922. She declares that it was necessary as a part of his duties to be on the locomotive after the train had passed through Trebeins, about 1:30 in the morning, and that the boiler of the locomotive exploded throwing water and steam on the decedent hurling him through the air and causing severe injuries from which he died December 7,1922.

The plaintiff charges the explosion and the injuries received by her husband were caused by negligence, in that the boiler was maintained in an unsafe, improper, insecure, dangerous defective and insufficient condition. The petition declares the boiler was negligently permitted to become coated with mud and scale, causing the crown sheet, side sheets and staples to become burned and insecure: that there was insufficient water in the boiler causing the crown sheet, side sheets and staples to become burned and insecure; that the boiler did not have sufficient strength to resist the steam pressure from within and that the engineer and firemen negligently failed to keep water in the boiler.

The petition avers the decedent had an earning capacity of $200 a month, and was the sole support of the plaintiff. She asks $30,000 under this action. The second cause of action recites the same charges and declares the decedent was conscious until his death, that he was burned all over the body, his right arm crushed from the elbow to the wrist, all his teeth knocked out, both eet badly fractured and that he suffered great pain and anguish in mind and body. The plaintiff asks $20,000 under the cause of action as damages compensatory for the conscious pain and suffering of the decedent.

Davis V. Michel, of Minneapolis, Minn., and George R. Murray of Dayton, are attorneys for the plaintiff.

In commenting on the figures, Judge Dixon said:

"This increase is due to the desire of so many young men to live by their wits and avoid real work."

NAVARRE INDESTRUCTIBLE PEARLS

Why We Selected L. A. Wagner to Sell NAVARRE PEARLS

A CHAIN of steel is no stronger than its weakest link. A national selling organization is judged, and rightly, too, by its local representative. Primarily, we designated this firm as distributors of Navarre Pearls because of its well-known integrity; because of its reputation as a house of fair and square dealing; because it enjoys the confidence of the people.

It is the business of lovely woman to enhance her loveliness—Navarre Pearls add wondrously to her natural charms. It is our business to submit the claims of Navarre Pearls to discriminating women through the most estimable medium; we have done so, we believe, in the selection of this reputable firm as our sole and exclusive representatives.

BUS OPERATORS ARE ORDERED TO APPEAR BEFORE CITY COURT

Clarence Stoner, owner and operator of the Dayton and Xenia Bus Company, and one of his drivers will be in Police Court, Saturday morning, to face charges, before Judge E. D. Smith, of infractions of city regulating ordinance.

The men were ordered into court after affidavits were filed with Judge Smith by Judge Marcus Shoup, attorney for the Dayton and Xenia Motor Bus Company, an opposition line operated as a subsidiary of the Springfield and Xenia Southern Railway Company.

Three affidavits were filed in Police Court. They charge Stoner with operating four interurban busses and not paying license fees for two, with operating on West Market street instead of West Main street in violation of an ordinance and in operating his busses for taxicab service without paying for a taxi license. Police checked up on the affidavit that the company operated its busses on Market instead of Main streets, Friday morning. They said two busses left Xenia by way of Market street and one by way of Main street. Similar affidavits were presented to the City Commission Thursday night by Judge Shoup. The ordinances alleged to have been violated carry penalties involving heavy fines and the possibility of revocation of licenses by the City Manager.

Police have advised Stoner and his driver to be in Police Court Saturday morning.

CASE MAY CAUSE CHANGES IN SYSTEM

Columbus, Ohio July 13.— Growing out of the mysterious disappearance of Rev. Frederick W. Gordon, Franklin pastor, who is sought on charges of having issued worthless drafts, a state reform may come about.

Detectives working on the case learned he was paid various sums by the state for rehabiliation work for the state educational department. Through this means the detectives hoped to get finger prints of the missing minister. It was learned, however that the state does not keep finger prints of its employes as does the Federal Government. Detectives suggested this would be a valuable thing for the state to do. Massachusetts now has the identification system. Banks and business houses have found it very valuable.

In two other cases recently arisen where finger prints would be valuable in identifying the culprits who took unusually large quantities of state [illegible] from the State Fair grounds. In the other photograph he is shown with two half-breed daughters of a trapper, at Candle.

RETURN FROM CAMP

Edward Flynn and Homer Henrie who have spent two weeks at the Boy Scout Camp near Dayton, have rturned home.

Two trophies were awarded in Camp for a fifty yard dash, in swimming, one of which was won by young Henrie and the other by a Dayton Scout. This prize was a strand of Indian beads with an eagle's claw as a pendant.

Homer Henrie is returning to camp Sunday for anothed week's stay. All Scouts report good treatment, good food and good times.

Cincinnati, O., July 13.—Although little more than half the year has elapsed, Hamilton County's motor fatality roll exceeds that for all 12 months of 1922. When two deaths yesterday boosted the total to 76, the figure exceeded by one the number of gasoline casualties for 1922.

A letter from Miss Letitia Dillencourt, of this city, who is spending the summer in Asheville, N. GETS PLEASANT SURPRISE

"About 6 months ago my father was very sick with his stomach, which had been troubling him for several years. Three doctors said he had cancer and one said it was gall stones—all agreed an operation necessary, but on account of his age I was afraid to risk it. I told a friend about it who said his wife had been through the same trouble and had been cured by taking Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. It at once brought a bottle for father and he is now as strong as a bear and can eat more ham and cabbage than any 3 men." It removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at Sayre & Hemphill's and druggists everywhere. adv

COMMISSION DEFERS ACTION OF PROPOSED GAS RATE INCREASE

Action on the proposed ordinance fixing a 50 cent service charge on all subscribers of The Ohio Fuel Gas Co., in Xenia City was deferred until next meeting night by the City Commission Thursday night.

Considerable discussion led to the agreement to table the proposed ordistance for another two weeks. Judge H. L. Smith, president of the commission, proposed the delay pending an investigation of why city councils in Troy and Piqua passed the ordinance. On motion of Commissioner S. M. McKay, seconded by Commissioner G. H. Hudson, the proposed ordinance was tabled for two weeks.

A report of an investigation made by City Solicitor J. A. Finney, marked the discussion of the ordinance. Five increased schedules for Xenia have been filed with the Utilities Commission by the company since the franchise expired, the report showed. Only four of these raised the domestic rate to consumers.

The first increase, June, 1916 increased the rate to 35 cents per thousand or 30 cents net, minus the usual discount. The second increase came May 1, 1917 when the rate was jumped to 40 cents or net 35 cents. October 3, 1917 a new schedule was placed in effect not changing the rate to domestic consumers but affecting only the manufacturers.

The third domestic increase came January 19, 1920, when the rate jumped to 45 cents or 40 cents net. March 25, 1921, the rate was jumped to 50 cents gross or 45 cents net. All were obtained before the State Utilities Commission. The rate effected in March, 1921, is now in use here. There are now 2421 consumers in the corporate limits, it was shown. The service charge will increase the company income $6 a year for each subscriber or $14,526.

City Solicitor Finney told the commissioners that if the proposed ordinance is turned down by the commission, the company can immediately go before the State Utilities Commission with an increased rate schedule. The city would then have 30 days in which to protest. If there is no protest the the rate becomes effective immediately. If the city should protest, the old rate would prevail for 120 days from the time of the filing of the new schedule. At the end of that time the Company would have the right to charge the increase pending the outcome of the litigation.

There would be a hearing before the Utilities Commission, and an appraisal of the company properties to determine if the company now has a fair rate of income considering the capital invested. Either side in event the decision is against it may go directly to the State Supreme Court.

The proposed ordinance would place a flat service charge of 50 cents on all meters. It would eliminate a minimum charge of 50 cents now collected. Thus the consumer of 1,000 feet of gas monthly would be subject to a 95 cent charge, including the discount.

Company officials say the cost of giving service, carrying and billing a subscriber only using 1,000 feet of gas monthly is more than the profit on 45 cents worth of gas. They ask the increase to pay the cost of the extra bookkeeping at $14,526 a year is exbookkeping at $14,526 a year is expensive.

Styles BY LENORE

If you are one of those who hold no brief against a thing you like merely because it has become popular, here is a suggestion for a delightfully cool and comfortable frock to pack into your grip for the week-end jaunt.

It is a model I have seen a great many smart-looking girls wear in New York. And it is equally charming in any of the shades that are liked this year, almond green, white edging the hem of the skirt, the pleated frills and the belt. The treatment of this feature incidentally, is extremely individual.

I have also seen this frock in black with white accessories, and with a white bodice surmounting a colored skirt.

WHISTLES FOR TEN HOURS.

Paris, July 13.—The world's whistling record is held by Jules Reynier, a young business man of Traus, near Marseilles. Reynier whistled continuously for 10 hours and 1 minute. A workman named Varois, in the contest with Reynier, whistled for eight hours. Neither of them ate during the contest, but Reynier drank beer while he whistled 81 consecutive tunes, all different, ending with the Marseillaise.

START OF BALLOON RACE THAT ENDED IN DEATH

U. S. Naval Lieutenant L. J. Roth, a tiny figure at the top of the balloon netting, is shown making the final inspection of the naval balloon A-6698, in which he and Lieutenant T. B. Null started from Indianapolis on July 4, in the elimination races to determine the three American entries in the James Gordon Bennett races in Europe this Fall. The balloon fell into Lake Erie, and the two officers were drowned.

HAPNER APPOINTED TO REVENUE OFFICE

L. J. Hapner, Dayton, has been appointed temporary division chief of the United States Internal Revenue office at Dayton succeeding Charles Millard, division chief, who resigned.

THE MISFIT

By Jane Phelps

A TROUBLED CONSCIENCE

Chapter XLV

Harper had said that Natalie was wheeling a young babe, said in a way that implied suspicion—but—suspicion of what? Horace thrilled at the thought that perhaps he was a father; that Natalie because of his— his mother's actions—had kept her expectations to herself, not realizing her unfairness to him, who so wanted children. But if it were his child—if —it were—why did Harper speak in that sneering voice? And if not his—whose?

"She was good," he said thinking of Natalie. "It must be my child." He recalled her modesty, her wholesome independence. His faith in her came back to him, but with an increased anxiety to find her. He haunted the street upon which Harper said he saw her, but now that she was searching for work all the morning ,and striving to assist Etta in the afternoon she did no go so far afield when she took the baby for an airing. So Horace watched in vain.

He wrote his mother, saying nothing of what Harper had told him save that he had heard Natalie was in New York, that he was searching for her.

One afternoon he ran into Beverly Rainsford. He had kept away from his own and his mother's friends since his return. He had two reasons. One their questions.

"Horace" Beverly said after greeting had been exchanged, "will you tell me about Natalie? Have you and she separated?"

'No—", then urged by her look of sympathy, Horace told her sparing himself not at all, but glossing over lightly his mother's attitude toward his wife.

"I drove her away, Beverly, just as surely as if I had told her to go. I was neglectful, she was lonely, alone in that house. I quarrelled with her, said things I would give my life to unsay. The poor girl had no recourse. I alone am to blame."

"Do you know where she is?" Beverly asked.

"No, I came back from Europe to find hor, but havent succeeded yet I shall never give up until I do."

'Naturally, Natalie never liked me. Horace, perhaps because your mother showed her preference for me too plainly. I would have been friends with her, but I didn't know how. She seemed always to repulse me—not by what she said but by her manner. I saw her one day—I tried to catch up with her, but in some way she evaded me. I think she saw me, that she ran from me."

"Where did you see her?" Hope again springing into life.

Beverly told him, but they both decided it not much of a clue, as Natalie had been simply hurrying along the street.

'Have you questioned her friends—those she knew before you were married" she asked.

"Before I went away, yes. Not since."

"Do so, Horace. And if I can help in any way let me know. I should like to see you happy, you and Natalie; she is too lovely to be alone and lonely," Beverly said as she left Horace, thinking how old and worn he looked.

"If only Natalie had know Beverly wanted to be friendly it might have helped her—helped us all," Horace murmured as he watched her car disappear. Yet he felt happier after this encounter. Beverly had spoken nicely of Natalie, praised her beauty, spoke of wanting to be her friend, perhaps if it were not too late, they might still be friends— some day.

If it should be too late!

This thought drove Horace Crandell almost mad. He had won the girl he loved, who loved him, then had gone his way, thinking just being his wife enough to satisfy her. She was so young and so lovely. What a fatuous fool he had been.

His life-long habit of giving his spare time to his mother, to the exclusion of all else, had been unfair to Natalie. He recalled how she had sat apart while he and his mother played chess, scarcely speaking or being spoken to; or spending the evening alone in her room while they amused themselves.

If an uneasy conscience is punishment, then Horace Crandell was surely being punished in the days he searched for his wife.
